Announcements concerning the 1910 Cornhusker, the "departmental idea, carried out to a certain extent last year, will be much elaborated in this year's annual."

This policy of division of the university interests into their respective departments has been gradually growing in favor with Cornhusker managers since the issue of the first book in 1907. It has also been advancing in other activities. One now hears a great deal more about the separate colleges as distinct organizations than was the case a few years ago. This or that college is now accredited with doing things which a short while ago would have been ascribed to the "University of Nebraska."

It is probably but a natural growth that the different colleges should wish a distinctive representation in the Cornhusker as well as in other student activities. But it would seem that an effort should be made in every line to emphasize the university more and the colleges less. The Cornhusker is a publication "of the upper classes

It seems strange that such a difficulty should confront the delinquency committee. It would appear that a student in the university would have a greater fund of common sense than seems to be possessed by those who thus willfully disregard authority. The delinquency committee has full power to suspend any student who fails to regard its injunctions. It is purely a matter of self-safety for a student to obey the requests of the committee. That being so, it is indeed strange that the present situation should arise. A few suspensions will probably bring about a change in the attitude of the sluffers.

L. J. Pepperberg, 1909, was married last week in Lincoln to Miss Rachel Carnes, former head of the dramatic schools. Mr. Pepperberg is connected with the United States geological survey, leading a party in the west last summer. Dean Winchester was another university alumni married last week. His wife is a former university lady who lived in Lincoln. Mr. Winchester is also with the U. S. G. S. Both couples will reside in Washington, D. C.

over to Lincoln once in a while. She learns something every time. This year she discovered that Nebraska is maintaining a training table in alleged direct opposition to the rules of the Missouri Valley conference. Probably another trip would serve to acquaint the Hawkeyes with the fact that the proposed legislation, which they say prohibited the table, never passed the conference by the required two-thirds majority. All of which is a matter of history to Nebraskans, but apparently Iowa is still in ignorance.

NO MINNESOTA GAME.

Minnesota football dopsters proclaim the fact that the Gophers' unwillingness to play Nebraska next year. According to the published stories the Minnesota students don't like to have their players and their glory damaged in a game which, after all, does not count in determining the western championship.

This attitude on the part of Minnesota is not new. There have been annual murmurs in the Gopher camp against the advisability of sending the pupils of Dr. Williams against the Nebraska line. It is true that Minnesota frequently does find a good proportion of her players in bad shape for a hard game after the Cornhusker contest. Undoubtedly her pride is somewhat hurt also by the lack of a better showing against the Nebraskans, for invariably the Scarlet and Creams plays a better game than the Minneapolis students expect.

But as to calling off the game, it seems hardly likely that Minnesota will feel constrained to that expedient. For one thing, it would seem too much like getting out of the way of a troublesome rival. But if the Gophers do fall to contract for further contests, it is not probable that Manager Eager will be seriously embarrassed to find a strong team to take their place.

Who said "Chicago"?

TOO MUCH SEPARATION.

And now it is the Cornhusker board of editors who come forward with the announcement of a further separation of the university into its component colleges. According to recent an-

of the University of Nebraska," not of the upper classes of the seven colleges of the university. In the "Nebraska spirit" should be given a supreme place and it would appear that this could best be done by making the annual a single book representative of the whole university rather than a collection of six or seven books under one cover.

Let the departments have their individual representation, but let us not base the organization of the whole book upon these departmental differences.

A NEW COACH.

The selection of I. P. Hewitt as coach of the Nebraska basketball team for 1909-10 will meet with the approval of a majority of the students. Mr. Hewitt is a thoroughly trained athlete and he knows basketball from A to Z. He is a man who commands the respect of his fellow men, and under his direction the Cornhusker five this year should be an exceptionally strong team.

The retirement of Dr. Clapp in favor of Mr. Hewitt marks simply another step in the growth of Cornhusker athletics. The time is coming, and coming soon, when each branch of Nebraska athletics will have a specialist of ability in the coaching position. As long as it was possible to get along with one man in the triple position of gymnasium instructor, track coach, and basketball coach, Nebraska could be satisfied with the excellent work of Dr. Clapp.

But the growth of all three of these departments demands a separation of the work involved in instruction. It is well, therefore, that Dr. Clapp retires from the basketball situation and that Mr. Hewitt takes up the task.

DELINQUENT STUDENTS.

The committee on student delinquency is experiencing some difficulty in obtaining responses to its notices demanding the attendance of certain students at the dean's office in the Administration building. It seems that there are some registered students in the university who not only fail to attend classes for which they are enrolled, but who fail also to offer reasons for their non-attendance.
