Daily Iowan Comments on the Manner in Which Nebraska Entertained Her Visitors Last Saturday.

In a recent issue of the Daily Iowan, the student daily of the University of Iowa, there appears a story signed "D. A." wherein the Iowa men express their appreciation of the treatment accorded them by Nebraska. The story in part follows:

"Students, managers, coaches, athletes and citizens of Lincoln united in being hospitable to the Iowa team Friday and Saturday. 'King' Cole, the coach of the Nebraska team, Manager Eager, and others all co-operated with the Hawkeye delegation in arrangements for the game, including special sections, etc. The students were kindly disposed toward the visitors and many of the rooters were shown through the university Saturday forenoon.

"The Iowa colonel of players, rooters and alumni was quartered at the Hotel Royal owing to the fact that the larger and better known hostels in Lincoln have a strict rule that no athletic teams shall ever be their guests. Here the Hawkeye interests centered and here the silent little band of Hawkeye sympathizers gathered on Saturday morning to discuss the chances in the afternoon. The Iowans were ultra-conservative in talking to the Lincoln residents, but among themselves they were saying, 'Iowa can show them if the men will only fight.'

"Seven hours later that same hotel lobby was filled with hoarse rooters smiling and tumbling over each other to grasp the hands of the tired and still exhausted players as they came out of the elevator. The team dressed at the hotel owing to the limited gymnasium accommodations. After the game as quickly as their clothes were changed they came downstairs for dinner. Then the students who had yelled for the team from the north stands greeted the members of the eleven. The unexpected had happened and everybody was happy.

"Blondy" (A. R.) Gorell of Newton, Ia., half back on the first team that Iowa ever had, was there. He played in 1888. "Joe" Brown of Clearfield, Ia., William Larrabee, Jr., and other alumni were in the lobby meeting the dozen or fifteen rooters that arrived Saturday in Lincoln. Former students now attending Nebraska or Omaha schools rooted for Iowa and were in and about the hotel most of the day."

CLUB TO CHOOSE NEW MEMBERS

Aspiring Actors Will Appear at the Temple Next Month.

A number of candidates, more than ever before, will try out for the Dramatic Club this year. These try-outs will be held in the Temple theater November 11. The applicants desiring to try out must register with the secretary of the club, Miss Margaret Guthrie, at which time they receive a number which denotes the time of their appearance. This obviates the necessity of the candidates waiting their turn through a long list of candidates. The pieces given for the try-outs may be either monologue, or several parts taken by one person, or three or four or more may take parts of some scene and give it together. All of the pieces chosen, however, must be from some play.

PICK IOWA TO GET BEATEN.

Freshmen Laws Don't Look With Favor on Hawkeys Eleven.

An enterprising member of the freshman law class yesterday took a straw vote of the first year students in that college to determine their sentiment in regard to the Iowa-Missouri game to be played next Saturday. The opinion was practically unanimous in favor of the Missourians and the guesses as to the probable score ran all the way from a bare victory to an overwhelming score.

From the indication thus offered it would seem that Nebraska students do not consider Iowa of prime importance in the western football situation, despite her holding Nebraska to a tie last week. The confidence in Missouri is interesting too, considering that that team is being especially pointed to defeat Kansas on Thanksgiving Day.

AT THE THEATERS.

"The Crisis" at the Lyric.
 A dramatization of Winston Churchill's great novel, "The Crisis," is the bill at the Lyric this week. "The Crisis" depicts the life of old St. Louis before and during the war in a manner which old residents of that city have pronounced to be wonderfully true to life. The courteous, hot-tempered southern gentlemen are shown in strong contrast to the quiet but determined northerners who immigrated into the city during the twenty years before secession broke out in the south. And in the midst of the story of strife and hardship, Mr. Churchill has woven a tale of intense human interest about characters of great beauty and strength.

In the dramatization, something of the finer depths of Mr. Churchill's visual picture is lost, but on the whole the play is a worthy production. For one who has not read the book and thereby had a chance to note Mr. Churchill's own careful characterizations, the drama is excellent. Although Miss Carter stars in the cast as Virginia Carvel, Miss Mackey as Aunt Nancy has drawn a good share of the applause. Mr. Bellaire as Eliphet Hopper proves to be an interesting villain and Mr. Murdock does well as Colonel Carvel. Mr. Kirkland as Silas Whipple is not so good, but this is due more to the hardness of the part than to the fault of the actor.
