HONORARY DEGREES.

The action of the board of regents in further restricting the granting of honorary degrees is certainly commendable. It shows an attitude on the part of the regents which will be appreciated by university scholars.

The university degree is supposed to stand for a certain measure of learning. It is presumed to represent a considerable amount of toil combined with some success. Too frequently a collegiate degree is granted by schools which do not maintain the

APPRECIATED.

Here is what the Daily Kansan had to say about the manner in which the Jayhawk team and rooters were treated by the Nebraskans last Saturday: "The students at Nebraska showed fine spirit at the game Saturday. When the Jayhawker team appeared they were first to applaud and when any Kansan was injured they were quick to give the man nine 'rahs. During the whole day the Nebraskans showed this same spirit and never was a lot of rooters better treated in the land of the enemy than was the bunch from Kansas. Nebraska always lays for Kansas and Kansas for Nebraska, but there is a friendliness and an esteem between the two schools that makes their relations exceedingly agreeable."

HE NEVER HAD TIME.

He was a college student. He had his good points, but "he never had time."

A place on a Y. M. C. A. committee was offered him. About a half hour's work for each of a half dozen socials during the year was all that was required. "I am carrying an unusual heavy study schedule this year," he Perhaps he did not have time to live. Most certainly it did not take much time for him to die. Saint Peter accosted him at the celestial gate. "You were so busy one earth," said the guardian saint, "you won't be at home here without something to do; come right in, we will find you a job at once." Promptly and without thinking—force of habit got the best of him—but Peter saw what reply was coming, and as the heavenly gate closed between them there came floating in through the lattice work of gold, the old familiar strain so often heard at college. JUNIOR HOP A BIG SUCCESS.

Hundred Couples Attend First University Dance at Lincoln.

The junior hop, the first university dance this year to be held at the Lincoln hotel, was a distinct success last evening. A hundred couples were in attendance and whiled away the evening, under the direction of Eddie Walt's orchestra.

James E. Lawrence was chairman of the dance and R. E. Weaverling master of ceremonies.

The next dance of the university season is that of the engineers at Fraternity hall next Friday. John Hoge is chairman of this hop.

high standards which should be practiced. In this country there is no regulation of the titles given by the various colleges, and consequently they mean much or little according as they are granted by a high standard or a low-standard school.

But all of the similar degrees of a single university mean the same thing. There is no distinction after they have been conferred between the honorary title and that granted in the regular college course. For this reason it would seem that care should be taken to give the honorary diplomas only to such men as approached, approximately at least, the standards required for a like degree at the close of a regular course. In other words, the honorary degree should be conferred to honor the university which gives it, not the individual recipient.

The action of the regents in making such degrees dependent upon the recommendation of the senate means that just these precautions will be taken.

MANY SURPRISES.

With the playing of games east and west today some of the football championships of the present season will be settled. In the west Minnesota or Wisconsin will accede to the conference title. In the east keen interest is shown in the intersectional contests, notably those between Chicago and Cornell, and Pennsylvania and Michigan.

These contests mark the approaching end of struggles which began early last September when the various teams began practice. At that time there were various prophecies made as to the probable conclusion of the season. It is a notable fact that many of these have been upset to a surprising degree.

said. "I haven't got time." His fellow literary society members expressed their opinion that he could make good at debating and hoped that he would increase his society's chances of winning by entering the tryouts. "Can't see my way clear," he replied. "It would take an hour a day for several weeks, and I haven't got time."

He had played football in his high school days and had been accounted worthy by the country newspaper writer to be listed among those who "played good ball." The coach eyed his athletic build and upon urging that he appear for practice was answered, "I don't believe I have any chance of making the team, there are too many of the old men back and besides."

I haven't got time." It happened to be a college where chapel was not noted for large student attendance. The suggestion was made to him that one of the ways in which he could get most out of his college career was to make some effort to be regular at chapel. Without much hesitation and with no thought he declared, that, "somehow I always have a lesson which other school duties prevent me from getting before the chapel hour and the recitation comes right after, so I haven't got time."

"Come out to the game and yell for the team," the local fans asked him. The rooters were not doing their best for they had not recovered from the sting of the last defeat. The next game was a crucial one. With the proper support of the student body, victory was not only possible, but very probable. All this was made clear to him. "The team is playing too ragged to deserve support," he excused himself with. "The little yelling I could do won't count, and anyhow, I am too busy, I haven't got time."

It is not recorded how he got through after life, though the lack of such record does not seem strange.
