SCRUBS OUT!

A lack of scrubs is reported to be bothering the Nebraska coaches in their work of preparation for the Denver game. With the coming of inclement weather Assistant Coach Harvey finds a lack of material with which to build up an opposition to the varsity.

This condition has bothered Nebraska in the past, but it has not been a factor so far this year. It should not be allowed to enter at this late date. Scrubs are an absolute necessity to the turning out of a good team. The sode, one which has been too often repeated at university social affairs.

It is easily said that no one was to blame, that it was all "fun," that everybody was good-natured and that no harm was meant. All of which may be true; but it is just as true that a little regard for conventional custom and some care for the personal feelings of those in charge of the dance should have presented such action as occurred.

University dances should be informal, thoroughly so. But there is a boundary line which separates informality from something not to be deigned in good society. The creation of a mob out of a grand march is a crossing of the boundary line. Friday evening there was no violence on the person of the master of ceremonies; no one tried to take programs by force. But under like conditions in the past that has been attempted. When one step is taken another is near at hand, and the only way to prevent a possible scene is to keep to the strict formality of the occasion.

The master of ceremonies made a mistake Friday in not allowing the distribution of programs to four persons instead of two. The long line and the prospect of a tedious wait were some of the things which caused the break in the line. The break would pre-eminent place in western football. Her victories were not doubtful, but rather of the smothering variety. Incidentally Nebraska can claim membership in the same class with Chicago and Wisconsin this year, if the comparative scores count for anything. Minnesota undoubtedly played better ball against Chicago and Wisconsin than against Nebraska, and the Gopher battle was Nebraska's hardest fight, (but nevertheless the showing is gratifying to Cornhusker supporters.

The school of commerce and administration at the University of Chicago, sometimes termed the "consular" school, though established less than two years ago, has a faculty of twenty-nine professors and instructors, and is growing to be recognized as in all essentials as truly professional as are the law and medical schools. While as yet no special diploma is given, graduates who are candidates for U. S. consularships will be certified to the president of the United States for appointment. The course occupies two years and students are not admitted to it until they have completed two years of undergraduate work. The courses are intended, however, not merely as preparation for the U. S. government service, but for the larger foreign field in which the great exporting and importing interests of the country are concerned. The demand for young men so equipped is considerable, and the object of the school is to turn out men equipped to take charge of the "foreign relations" of large business houses.

varsity must have a second team upon which to practice its plays.

The season did not end with the Kansas game. Nebraska still has two worthy foes on her schedule, foes whom she must defeat. Let the scrubs remember these things and show up for work when they are called. Rain, hail, or snow should not prevent their appearance.

FAKED YARNS.

In the Sunday issue of an afternoon newspaper there occurred a fake story to which the Nebraskan elsewhere calls attention as a sample of some of the dope that is now being handed out to the public by certain compliers of fanciful yarns. The Sunday story was not true, but what difference did that make? It was something new, something that no one had heard of before. So what matter if it was without fact? The gullible public would read and believe, and the little athletic editor would get the credit for unearthing another live one.

That is undoubtedly the view the ath. ed. took of it. He was probably right in presuming that most of his readers would swallow it whole. Therein lies the fault. The publication of such stories and the acceptance by the unknowing public causes more harm to legitimate enterprises than all the truth that could be told against them. The game of football is annually damaged more by fakisms than by any other one thing. If the ath. ed. is seeking to kill the gridiron game in Nebraska, he is doing good work to suit his aims. But he claims to be sincerely an exponent of the game. In that case he should forget a few of his pipe dreams and stick to the facts as least once a week.

GOOD MANNERS?

No one present at the junior hop at the Lincoln Friday evening should have come away without a sense of shame at the manner in which the students there behaved. The rush for programs and the breaking up of the grand march was a disgraceful epiprobably not have occurred had the march been carefully planned. And yet that is no excuse for the occurrence.

A STUDENT DIRECTORY.

The need of a student directory listing university students with their addresses and phone numbers is so apparent that it is almost unnecessary to call attention to it. The university Y. M. C. A. has in the past undertaken this work and is doing so this year. Their directory, however, is not ready for publication until nearly the Christmas vacation, and such a book is of most value earlier in the term. It would seem possible to get out a reliable directory in much less time, surely by November 1 of each year. If necessary the price of the book could be advanced to twice or three times its present cost, and yet it would sell rapidly. A directory is a necessity and the Y. M. C. A. or some other organization should see to it that the university is not left without one until so late a date.

MINNESOTA THE VICTOR.

As prophesied by the gridiron dopsters early last week, Minnesota won from Wisconsin Saturday and thereby captured the undisputed title to the western conference championship. The Gophers beat the Badgers by a score of 34 to 6, clearly demonstrating their superiority to anything which the Wisconsin team could offer.

The results of Minnesota's victory are not all shown by the simple statement of her winning the championship. The scores by which she won tell a remarkable tale of athletic prowess. Chicago was beaten 20 to 6 with one star, Johnson, out of the game. McGovern, the leading man on the Gopher team, as well as Johnson, was out of last Saturday's game, and still the score was 34 to 6. In the Nebraska game, Minnesota played without Pickering, the score there being 14 to 0, the smallest of the three.

Minnesota's winning of the championship by these scores gives her a
