And now Coach Cole officially brands the Tennessee yarn as a fake. In a telegram to Manager Eager he declares that he has made no move towards the acceptance of the job as coach of the southern team. What means, we wonder, will the ath. ed. adopt in his effort to land "Johnny" in the Cornhusker coachship?

Engineering students are certainly in hard luck this year. The delay in opening the new laboratories means unusual hard work for the latter part of the year, and even then it is doubtful whether the entire course can be properly completed.

over 40 per cent less than was the case at a similar time last semester. Such a showing as this is greatly to the advantage of the school and speaks well for the activities of Professor Engberg and other members of the delinquency committee.

The tables shown by the committee give Nebraska a delinquency percentage of only 22.4, which compares well with the figures submitted by other universities. The 6.6 per cent of delinquent hours compared with the total hours registered shows even more favorably for Nebraska. The latter figure is only a little more than half that of last semester. While some of this decrease is due to increased voluntary student effort a large amount of credit must be given to the committee which is this year keeping a rigid check on failures and back-sliding.

MAKING UP THE SCHEDULES.

The announcement that Ames is to play Nebraska next fall is pleasing to all Cornhusker students. The grid-iron games with the Iowa Aggies in past years have always ranked among the hardest contests which the Cornhuskers have played. The two teams have for several years been evenly matched and the battle was always a close one. In 1907 and in 1908 Nebraska made the winning points only in the very last few minutes of play. Not only have the games been close,

Considering the frequency of such pessimism and skepticism, the note sounded by Rev. Hays may well attract college students. Rev. Hays is not pessimistic. He reads the signs of the times in a way which for him at least indicates a renewal of ethical standards of a high order. He believes that the reaction against business laxity is about to come and he thinks that the college men and women are going to be the leaders in the new moral awakening.

AS TO A THIEF.

I feel very kindly towards the person who stole my note-book cover from the shelves in the basement of the library building. I know he must have been financially embarrassed or he would not have taken a cover costing only twenty-five cents. I'm sure he's a gentleman, for he was kind enough to leave my notes which had taken me months to gather. My name was written on both out side covers on a "Co-op" slip, and if the person will return my cover, I will give him enough to buy a new one. Will also be glad to lend him money occasionally to help him get through the school year.

Is there a man who has played on any team in the Missouri Valley who has not been given a place on some one of the numerous "all-Valley" teams? If such a one exist, he is certainly in a class by himself. From the published lists it would seem that every player in the west is a "champion" man.

Assistant Coach Mosse of Kansas names an All-Missouri Valley team which includes five Jayhawkers. Five out of eleven! And yet Missouri trounced Kansas 12 to 6.

SENIOR CAPS.

The senior girls are now appearing in their usual graduation caps, thereby marking themselves distinct from the girls of the three lower classes. Their donning of the mortarboards has led a prominent senior man to suggest the propriety of like action on the part of the men of the class. He does not necessarily advocate the use of the mortarboard arrangement, but he thinks it would be an excellent plan for the seniors to wear class caps of some sort.

The idea is not at all bad, and may well be considered by the seniors. Here at Nebraska the wearing of class caps has always been a more or less perfunctory custom, sometimes followed quite generally, but more frequently passed by without much notice. In some other schools the wearing of some designation marking each of the classes has become a traditional custom. While Nebraska is founding traditions it might be well to remember this one.

LESS DELINQUENCY.

The report of Professor Chatburn to Chancellor Avery showing the marked decrease in student delinquency at the mid-semester is most gratifying. According to the figures compiled by the delinquency committee, the delinquency for the current semester is but the rivalry has been of a clean and healthy sort, well calculated to work to the benefit of both schools.

With Ames back on the Cornhusker schedule, it is less probable that Missouri can be given a place on the list. No effort should be spared, however, to schedule the Tigers, if it can be done without overburdening the Cornhuskers with heavy games. Nebraska's interest in the work of the Missourians is marked and a game with the Columbia institution would undoubtedly draw a good crowd. It would seem advantageous to drop Denver and perhaps one or two other schools not of strict collegiate standing in order that both Ames and Missouri could be given games with Nebraska.

AN ETHICAL STANDARD.

In his convocation address Tuesday, Rev. S. Mills Hays issued an appeal to the young man of the twentieth century for adherence to the ethical standard rather than to the demand for gold at any cost. He declared that in his belief the present century was to mark the return to higher form of business competition with more regard for others and with less pernicious greed.

Rev. Hays' suggestion is well for university students to dwell upon. He sounds a note of optimism which is well worth noting amid the many pessimistic utterances which are going the rounds of both pulpit and press. Too many men, themselves of high character, deem it necessary to deplore the present business methods and the morals of the men engaged in commercial enterprises without offering any light to lead the way out of the alleged dark paths of moral turpitude. They point out the evils existent and then leave the youth to meditate upon the wickedness of his age without offering any solution of the difficulty, and many of them without apparently expecting anything but a steady progress to the eternal bow-wows.
