THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1910.

Every weather forecast on the campus has prophesied "slightly warmer" for Wednesday morning in "Lincoln and vicinity." But it wasn't so.

According to dispatches from Madison, Wis., where the American Association of Universities is holding its annual session, the delegates believe that assistant professors are underpaid. We imagine that there are a goodly number of full professors who might think the same truth applied higher up the scale as well.

competition when they face the University of Kansas team Friday and Saturday. The Jayhawkers as usual have a fast team and they are eager to duplicate their trick of last year by winning again the Missouri Valley championship. While the Cornhuskers have not much to fear at Manhattan, they will be up against a stiff proposition at Lawrence and hard work will be needed.

Leaving this morning, the team will have with them the earnest support of Nebraska students, and their welcome home in case of a victorious trip will be a warm one.

from a little child a gift of flowers which has been presented to her, he exhibits a lack of character which is almost incomprehensible. It is such despicable vandalism that one can hardly believe it true. If it be thoughtlessness, it should just as vigorously be condemned. It reflects no credit upon our university community. The least the offender can do is to comply with the request made in Dean Davenport's communication, though the wrong can never be righted.

TWO DEANS APPOINTED.

Former Nebraska Men Appointed to High Positions in Other Schools.

Word recently received states that two Nebraska men are coming to the front in their work. Dr. Weber, 1899, was recently appointed to the position of dean of the college of agriculture at the University of Cornell. After taking his master's degree here in 1890, Dr. Weber held a position of botanist in the department of agriculture at Washington, and then went to Cornell, where his work received the regard of his recent appointment.

News of this appointment came with the appointment of another Nebraska man to the office of dean of the college of agriculture of the University of Minnesota. This was Dr. H. F.
Woods, who graduated in 1900 and received his master's degree in 1902.

The fact which most impressed the Nebraska man was the manner in which the western man had gone east and the eastern man west for training in the same profession. For years it has been customary for the man reared in the western country to travel to the Atlantic coast for his higher education. It has not how-

ILL-JUDGED VANDALISM.

Illinois is bothered with petty vandalism as well as in Nebraska. A Illinois the thefts have taken on a more despicable form than at Nebraska, and the following sharp comment is made in the Daily Illini:

"All through the semester, more or less petty stealing has been going on about the university, and while this is bad enough, it can be more easily forgiven than the theft of the flowers from the Auditorium Wednesday, about which Dean Davenport has sent in a communication to this morning's Illini. When any person about this university stoops to tak-

THE FIRST TRY.
The first intercollegiate athletic event in which Nebraska participates this year will be played at Manhattan, Kansas, tonight, when the Cornhusker basketball five meets the team representing the Kansas Aggies. The Nebraska five goes to Kansas in good shape and should play a strong game against able opponents.

The interest in the game tonight and in the two with the University of Kansas on succeeding evenings is greater than ordinary from the very fact that they are the first of 1910.
Superstitious students are watching the outcome of these contests as they may be auguries of what the coming year is to bring. Last year's season was not a glorious one in any sport and students generally will rejoice in an immediate reaction with the beginning of this year's schedules, from the string of defeats.

The Cornhusker five is generally considered to be a strong aggregation, but the Nebraskans will meet hard
