REGENTS SHOULD ACT.

The university regents should not long delay action on the proposed campus extension. There has been talk of an enlarged campus at sundry times during the past ten years. At the present time the agitation has reached a more definite point than in any previous year. The only thing now delaying the preparation of plans for a proposed new campus is the determination by the board of the direction of the extension. This the board should lose no time in deciding. The matter is one of prime importance, of great interest to citizens

COLE ANOTHER YEAR.

Coach "King" Cole has again been elected to train the Cornhusker football team in the art of gridiron warfare. Following a lengthy discussion by students and others of the comparative merits of various coaches, the athletic board has voiced its confidence in the ex-Michigan man by a unanimous vote. The issue is now up to Cole and it is understood that he will accept the tender of his old position.

With the election by the board, the coach question is settled, and there should be none who will not so regard it. There were undoubtedly a number of students who had preferences for other men than Cole as the 1910 football teacher. There was also a strong organization of outsiders working against the re-election of Cole, these men being opposed to his selection partly because of Cole's failure to put forth a championship team in 1909, and partly because they specifically desired another man for the place.

Despite the anti-Cole influences, the board picked him from a squad of fifteen as the best man for the place. It considered that he was the best coach to be obtained and it believed him capable of turning out a good team if the right kind of material were forth-

Small Crowd Expected at Hop to be Held at Fraternity Hall.

A considerable difference will be evident between the condition prevailing at the freshman hop last Saturday and that at the sophomore informal next Friday, if the estimates of Chairman Clark of the latter dance are worth anything. Chairman Clark says that the sale of tickets indicates that the crowd is going to be small. While he is worrying somewhat over the financial success of the dance, he is on the other hand glad that the floor will not be so overcrowded as to be uncomfortable for pleasant dancing.

P. B. Roen is master of ceremonies of the dance and the following are on the committee: J. D. Pomerene, G. C. Flack, W. L. Davis, K. F. Warner, B. F. Freiden, Marguerite Klinker, Mildred Bevins, Grace Holman, Martha Bell and Irma Herman. Dr. and Mrs. Condra, Professor and Mrs. Conant, and Miss Mary Graham will chaperone the hop.

NEW DEBATE CLUB.

A new debating club is to be organized tonight, composed largely of students who have already had some experience in public speaking. That there is an opening for such a club is evident and it is to be hoped that the new club will receive all support necessary to make it a success from the start.

The club, according to the plans of its promoters, will infringe on neither the present Students' Debating Club or the debating fraternity of Phi Alpha Tau. It will occupy a field distinct from either of these and one which Nebraska has not yet developed. At several other universities the society or club plan of developing debaters for the intercollegiate teams has been found to be successful. Some of the schools which have been winning from Nebraska in the Central Debating League have adopted this plan and it has been successful against the unorganized methods here pursued.

Unquestionably Nebraska has not been meeting recently with the success which she should have in debate. Her representatives have been defeated in three out of four contests during the past two years. That is a record which no school should countenance without strenuous efforts to recover the lost ground. There was a time a few years ago when Nebraska ranked at the top of the list in the west. Since the formation of the debating league and the development of organized debating at other schools, she has fallen behind. The fault has largely been that the other schools developed their methods progressively. Nebraska had the start in the movement, but she has remained stationary. The recent series of defeats should cause new efforts for a better scheme of developing the intercollegiate speakers. The new club is a first coming. The board was undoubtedly interested in the coach question—more so probably than any other group of persons. The members have not acted hastily and their judgment should be accepted. Those who opposed Cole should realize that the best authority has considered him the man for the place. They should further recognize that fair-play demands that Cole be given firm support and have a chance to do his best next fall.

Those who point to the 1909 fiasco as an evidence of Cole's unfitness as a coach should look back also to 1907, when he gave the Cornhuskers a championship team. They should remember also 1908, when it is conceded that a schedule of undue severity was the only thing to prevent a like result. Further, in viewing the 1909 season, they should recollect the pessimism which hung about athletic affairs during the first two weeks of practice. At that time there was a striking lack of material evident and few expected anything like a good showing for the season. Then came the Minnesota game and Cornhusker stock went soaring. In the slump which followed, when the first prophecies began to come true, the team and Cole were measured not by their work early in the year, which was the real indicator, but by the phenomenal battle at Omaha. Their backers were disappointed, after having their hopes raised to a high pitch, and the contrast was responsible for much of the later agitation.

If Cole accepts the position tendered him, his past work should be remembered as a whole, not merely the unfavorable parts of it. He should not be hampered with a lack of support. Rather his doubters should give him additional aid in order that if he does fall they may not themselves share the blame.

But with the right sort of support, and with good material, Cole will not fall.
