GREEKS TO CLASH IN ATHLETICS TONIGHT

LIST OF ENTRIES FOR THIRD FRAT INDOOR MEET COMPLETE.

EXPECT SOME RECORDS BROKEN

Winners of the Events to Meet the Point Winners of the "Barb" Meet to Be Held on Charter Day.

The largest indoor meet in university history will be held in the armory this evening. This is the annual interfraternity meet. Two indoor meets have been held in the past by the Greek letter fraternities and this is the third of the annual meets.

For the past two years only a limited amount of interest has been taken in the meets by the fraternity men, but this year more men have been entered upon the list of candidates for honors than ever before. Last year where there were but six fraternities entered, there are nine or ten listed this year. Each fraternity is limited to three entries for each event, and nearly every organization has put in their allotted number of men for each event in which they expect to be point winners.

Records Were Fast.

Last year some of the best indoor records ever made at the university were made at this interfraternity meet, and it is the hope of the interfraternity athletic board this year that as many as possible of the former indoor records will be broken.

Last year the record for the twenty-five-yard dash was tied at this meet and the shot-put was broken, but the record was not allowed to stand, as the ring from which the shot was put was not of the official dimensions. In the fence vault it was attempted to break the former record, but this was not done, although the record was tied.

The winners of points in this meet contest the winners of points in the "barb" meet next Tuesday afternoon. This meet next week is the regular Charter Day meet. The winners of places in the events at this meet are considered school champions in the events. All three point winners in each of the "barb" and fraternity meets will be entered Charter Day. In the twenty-five-yard dash the first four men will run against each other to win their honors in the meet Tuesday.

CONTINUES LECTURE ON PASSION PLAY

PROF. LEES DESCRIBES SCENES OF WONDERFUL DRAMA.

TELLS OF THE VAST AUDITORIUM

Scenes of Ober-Ammergau Production Presented and Illustrated with Stereopticon at Convocation Yesterday.

Before an audience that completely filled Memorial hall, Prof. T. J. Lees today concluded his lecture on "The Ober-Ammergau Passion Play." Last Tuesday at convocation Professor Lees told a story which contains what he believes to be an authentic reason why the folk of Ober-Ammergau periodically reproduce the "Passion Play." Today he followed up in detail, as far as his limited time would permit, in the presentation of the "Passion Play" in 1900 and also as it will appear this summer in Ober-Ammergau. He accompanied this lecture with stereopticon views of the different scenes of that great drama, which gave to his words such reality and truth that one could almost feel the deep solemnity which is said to attend the resurrection and ascension scenes of the real "Passion Play."

After a brief summary of the contents of the first division of his lecture, Professor Lees said in part:

"During the first two centuries, after the making of that wonderful vow, the 'Passion Play' was given in a large meadow bordering on Ober-Ammergau. Later, however, because of inclement weather, an immense theater was built, costing $50,000 and holding approximately 4,000 people. During the summer of every tenth year, twenty or thirty performances of this drama are given—every performance coming on Sunday or Wednesday. The play begins at 8 o'clock in the morning and continues until 6 o'clock in the evening, the hours from 12 a. m. to 2 p. m. inclusive being devoted to lunch.

Starts With Cannon.

"At the signal of a cannon, the great play begins. At the rise of the curtain, a chorus of forty men and women enter from each side of the stage. The members of the chorus are all dressed in robes, mantles, sandals and other apparel of oriental pattern. These robes are worn throughout the play, with the single exception of the crucifixion scene, in which black robes are worn in their place. The duty of the chorus is the same as that of the Greek classical drama, namely to impress the moral teachings of the play. One member of the chorus is appointed to give a prologue before every anthem. This he does in a very impressive manner.

"The next scene shows children kneeling at a cross. The children which play this part are very young, but their age seems to lend pathos to the scene as they cling about the cross of their departed Savior.

"After this the real 'Passion Play' begins, and as the curtain rises, one sees a reproduction of that wonderful entrance of Christ into Jerusalem. How he approached the temple; how the people shouted and decorated his path with palm branches; and how he entered the temple, overthrew the money tables and rebuked the gamblers, are all incidents of this scene which give it effectiveness and grandeur.

"The part of Christ is played by Anton Lange, a mere youth, but to all that have seen him, he is a marvel. There is something beautiful and almost angelic in his face, and by merely gazing upon him one can form a clear and beautiful conception of the real Christ.

Following Scenes.

"The following scene shows Jesus in Bethany, bidding farewell to his mother and disciples. Here we are brought into closer relation to the disciples and their distinct dispositions, even down to the ignoble Judas—played by a man named Sling, who presents his part with great talent.

"After this come the scenes where Judas barter with the Pharisees; where Jesus prays in the garden of Gethsemane; the last supper; and the climax where Judas betrays Christ with a kiss."

This closed the first four hours of "The Passion Play," and at this juncture Lees was forced to discontinue his lecture.

UNIONS GIVE PARTY.

Literary Society Will Hold Valentine Festivities at the Temple Tonight.

The Union Literary Society will hold a Valentine party tonight at their hall in the Temple. The hour of meeting is 8:15. Something novel and entertaining is promised. Miss Ethel Chambers has charge of the affair. Festivity will be the order of the evening. Everyone is to bring a valentine.

MANY VISIT THE OBSERVATORY.

Coy Mars Hid Behind Haze in Southwestern Sky.

About 150 people, including many people from outside the university, visited the university observatory on Wednesday night to see Halley's comet. It was not visible because of the haze in the southwest. Professor Swezey explained to the crowd that Halley's comet is now visible, but very indistinctly, by means of the telescope. He also discussed Halley's comet, as to its origin and many other features connected with it. The observatory will be open to the public some evenings this week to look at the comet, providing the sky is not overcrowded.

CHANGES IN HIGH SCHOOL GAME.

Rules for Prep School Football Will Probably Be Revised.

High school football will undergo a thorough revision if the ideas of Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago prevail at the next meeting of the national rules body on March 25.

Stagg returned recently and told what he will attempt as a member of the special committee appointed to draw up suggestions for the prep school game.

Stagg has three definite notions about the game as played by high schools, and his solutions are as follows:

Require a medical examination of all athletes who participate in a high school or club game before they are permitted to play.

Shorten the halves to a maximum of twenty minutes, or make four quarters of ten minutes each, with a five-minute intermission.

Prevent games between unevenly matched high school teams and abolish games between high schools and universities.

TO STOP DANCES IN CAMPUS BUILDINGS

AUTHORITIES DESIRE TO MAKE LAST YEAR'S RULING EFFECTIVE.

WILL TAKE EFFECT CHARTER DAY

No Dances in Buildings on the Campus to Be Permitted Without Written Consent of the Chancellor.

Owing to circumstances which have arisen during the past few weeks, Chancellor Avery is desirous that the ruling passed last fall regarding the holding of functions on the university campus shall be published. The ruling passed by the board of regents May 20, 1909, is as follows:

"There shall be no dances in any of the university buildings, either at the farm or city campus, without special permission from the chancellor's office. This shall not apply to the Temple, at which dances may be scheduled through the office of the superintendent of grounds and buildings, after due approval."

Reason for Publication.

The reason for the publication of this ruling at the present time is that the holding of basketball informals and other social functions on the university campus has been in practice for some time since the passing of this rule. The university authorities desired to make the enforcement of this ruling as gradual as possible. But now the chancellor feels that the time has come when it must be enforced and that such functions as are specified in the ruling will not be permitted unless there is unusual reason why they should.

The matter was brought more directly to the notice of the chancellor by the fact that a number of basketball informals have been held in the armory. These informals are more or less public in their nature, in that the games are public.

The ruling as passed by the board of regents will become effective after Charter Day. After that time no functions at which there is dancing will be permitted in buildings on the university campus without a written permit of the chancellor. This authority will be obtained only when the circumstances in its favor are of the utmost weight.
