HATS.

At the risk of becoming tiresome we are again forced to rise to the occasion—and protest. It is neither a political or moral evil against which we are about to launch our pen. It is only hats.

year, while the teacher himself gets only about $2,500? How can a $2,500 man train a $10,000 man and why does not the $2,500 teacher go out into the world and get the $10,000 position that he prepares others to take?"

To a man like Mr. Crane this argument is unanswerable. Fortunately most of the people in the world have a different mental make-up and look upon the world from a different viewpoint. Mr. Crane can not conceive of any other goal for human aspiration except the accumulation of wealth. The positive benefitting of mankind does not seemingly enter his mind and he can not conceive of a man giving his life up largely to service. The university professor serves man more than any other class of people. His emoluments are generally not large in comparison with his talents and his powers, but the fact that he is able to do good in the world is compensation in itself.

There are many teachers at the university who could go out into the world and make largely increased salaries. For instance there are several men in the engineering school who could earn $10,000 a year following their professions out in the world. There is one teacher in the university who can command a salary of $15,000 yearly. Mr. Crane is wrong when he thinks that university professors are to mention here, in passing, the positive advantages of debate. It develops the scholarly attitude of thoroughness by forcing the debater to go to the bottom of the matter and carefully weighing pro and con, every argument. It develops the ability to speak easily and fluently. The work in refutation trains a man to think quickly, accurately under pressure. The principles of logic must be grasped and applied to concrete arguments. I might continue, but enough has already been said.

Committee Will Decide in About Two Weeks.

The songs submitted for the contest to secure a Nebraska song are in the hands of the committee. Six songs have been submitted, and the committee expects to have arrived at a decision in about two weeks. The songs were submitted complete in music and verse and it is reported that the result will be a song which Nebraska can be proud to call its song.

The song committee who are acting as judges are Mrs. Raymond, Professor and Mrs. Conant, Doctor Sherman, Donald D. Plum, Professor Hagenow, and Edward Walt.

we discover that a ruling was passed last year regarding women's hats. This ruling prohibited women from wearing hats in the class room. It did not forbid the hat. Nor did it forbid them to wear a cap in the class room. But it did not allow women to keep their hats on when attending classes.

Now a woman's hat may be a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It may enhance the natural loveliness of the co-ed. Far be it from our intention to deny it. But the hat is not transparent.

RAVING.

'Tis the age of agents. The time is with us once again when the student is pursued by designing representatives of agencies who plead with him to take a position which will make him a millionaire in a summer. These alluring offers so perplexed a student in a neighboring institution that he expressed his views under the alluring title of "A Bollermaker Hamlet." We quote his raving:

"To be or not to be; that is the eternal question. Whether it is better to accept a position that hath fat financial backing, or to return to the pastoral fields of youth wherein the rosy cheeked apple ripens in the October sun; that is the question, and forsooth we know not the answer thereof."

IS IT PRACTICAL?

Millionaire Crane of Chicago, whom there is not a more persistent foe to education in the universe has again tried to show the fallacy and impracticability of scientific training. The Chicagoan has prepared what he considers a knock-out blow to all the arguments for education. The knock-out is in the form of a question and is as follows: "If education is practical and useful, why is it that teachers will train men to be able to command salaries of $5,000 to $10,000 a impractical and unable to succeed in the workaday world. They know that there is something else in life besides money-making. Mr. Crane has yet to learn that fact.—Daily Kansan.

To the Editor of the "Nebraskan":

May I speak a word with regard to a dispatch received from Missouri in which a learned professor decries debate. I think a grave injustice would be done debating and debaters did his charges go unanswered. The learned man is wrong in his first premise. He says that debaters are taught that anything can be proved by "eloquence and rhetoric."

Now anyone who has attended debates recently at the University of Nebraska knows of how little importance are rhetoric and eloquence. In the recent debate against Minnesota, the Nebraska men were far superior to their opponents in delivery. Who won?

As a matter of fact the basic principle of debate is that there are two sides to a question; that good valid arguments exist for both sides. By good valid arguments, I do not mean merely rhetorical phrases presented with "fire and fervor," but arguments based on sound principles of logic. The debater, then, is taught to search for these arguments and present them in attractive form and manner. That debaters do not use merely sophistry in their work is shown by the statement often heard: "I did not believe in it at first, but after I made a thorough study of the question, I came to believe in it." They have searched for the valid arguments for or against a proposition and having carefully examined them have found them good. Further explanation of this attitude I leave to the student of psychology.
