IMPOSTOR?

There is another one. Yesterday we boasted of possessing the editor of "The Japan Magazine" as a graduate of Nebraska. Today we receive an exchange in which the University of Washington claims the same distinction for a graduate. Miss Yncald, the Washington editor of the magazine, is not an impostor as we had at first supposed. She is the English editor of the magazine and a native of the United States. Y. Bryan Yamashita, the Nebraska graduate, is the Japanese editor and a native of Japan. We still have the best of Washington when it comes to loyalty.

tional institution, demand a certain standard of work and scholarship is the foundation of the work of the committee.

The work of the committee has been pushed vigorously this year. It has developed from the most general supervision of the field to a particular examination of the record of the individual. As a consequence the committee and its work has been brought into prominence. "Delinquency" has been heard more frequently than in the past. The result is that many people have gained and are gaining the impression that something is wrong. Some think that the average student must be made of poorer stuff than his predecessors. Others think that the requirements in scholarship imposed upon the student are too heavy. Yet in reality it is due to neither of these causes. It is merely the unearthing of delinquency which, owing to the general nature of the supervision, has hitherto been unnoticed.

Just what the result of the system will be cannot be gathered from any statistics so far compiled at Nebraska. The general opinion seems to be that it will raise the standard of scholarship. In the first place, it compels a student to make up any back work before attempting to carry full work in advance. Leaving a "condition" until the last semester of the senior year

ATHLETES WOULD RUN IN SILK.

Suits Would Be More Stylish and Serviceable.

Silk suits for track athletes! Extravagant styles may prevail on the cinder path this spring if Columbia dressmakers can be induced to make skirts and "flappers" out of colored silks.

When university women adopted the sweater as a correct form of dress for class room, they little thought that the boys would want silk suits for track work. Some of the track men of the University of Missouri sent in an order for silk costumes. The sporting goods houses sent back word that they had never heard of such a thing.

The members of the team and the management compromised on cotton suits with colored silk stripes down the trousers and around the waist and a silk "M" on the front of the shirt. The old suits were laundered and sent away for the "trimming" last week.

"Silk suits would be more stylish and everyone likes silk," said a track man. "Cotton suits, with colored cotton stripes, are not serviceable. They have to be washed frequently and the colors in the stripes and letters fade. Silk suits would stand washing much better."—University Missourian.

The Harvard-Yale crew race will probably be on June 30.

the secret to you? We will admit that we were not "let in" on the mystery until yesterday, when an exchange came to our desk announcing that the 22d of February was Washington's birthday. The matter has been kept with such secrecy that few if any of the student body were able to discover it.

When the 22d dawned bright and frosty, the student with the eight o'clock class arose and betook himself to the university. Not a sign of a flag, not a hint that any one had been born on that particular day 178 years ago. Likewise the student with the nine o'clock class was unconscious of the fact that it was the anniversary of the birth of the Father of Our Country. Such was the condition which prevailed throughout the day.

The exchange from which we gleaned our knowledge of the secret says:

"George Washington, president, soldier, patriot, statesman, farmer, aristocrat, was born 178 years ago. The twenty-second day of this month the American nation will, in various degrees and manners, do homage to the memory of George Washington—the man."

After reading this we can arrive at one of two conclusions: Either the University of Nebraska does not belong to the "American nation" referred to, or the "various degrees" includes no homage, the condition prevailing at Nebraska. Of course there is always the possibility that everyone on the campus had forgotten the date or what event it is supposed to mark. If so, it is time some one woke up.

DELINQUENCY.

With the report of the delinquency committee made public yesterday morning the attention of the student body is again called to the fact that the university is, after all, an educational institution, and not a place in which to merely spend time. That the university should, as an educa-or changing it into a "failed" through carelessness is in this way avoided.

In addition to this it calls the attention of the student to his delinquency before it is too late, thus saving many a student from expulsion. After being called before the committee the student is given an opportunity to work and remain in the university. All of these things have a tendency to keep the students at Nebraska and at the same time to keep them up to a certain standard of scholarship.

Yet to many of the student body the present movement appears as an indication of the tendency to increase faculty supervision and decrease the freedom of the student body. It is a tendency toward the high school system of complete supervision. The student who comes to Nebraska is more than a high school student. He is often a self-supporting citizen of Nebraska, who feels that the close restrictions placed upon him are pre-supposing that he is unable to exercise judgment for himself. It is this class of students that has placed self-government on its feet in many of the colleges of the present day. While self-government has not been sufficiently tried to record either a success or a failure the advisability of too much restriction is questionable. When the tendency in many of the largest colleges of the country lies in a directly opposite direction a conservative yet progressive movement in the same direction would be in keeping with the rank Nebraska holds among the colleges of the United States.

A conference of the members of the Episcopal church in the colleges of New England will be opened at Yale on February 25.

The student council at Iowa college, Grinnell, Iowa, has recommended that dancing shall not be recognized as a college amusement.
