The Kansas basketball five suffered defeat at the hands of the Washington five. It was the Jayhawkers' first defeat, and in telling how it came about, the Kansan says: "Johnson threw a basket and while the ball was in the air the final whistle blew. The referee, with entire disregard for the rules which allow such goals to count, threw out the resulting two points, and Kansas lost." There is only one thing worse than a bad referee and that is a bad loser.

about its glowing stove of a winter evening are gone. But their opinion as to the impracticability of an education still survives in many parts of the country. Consequently an editorial on the business training given by a college or university, appearing in the Brown Herald, is well worth quoting as follows:

"Mr. Theodore P. Shonts, college man any type of the highly successful business man, expresses his views upon the value of a college training for a business career in a recent number of System. Some of Mr. Shonts' observations are worthy of consideration. He says, 'Business men are essentially thinking men. They have been trained by experience and by their natural proclivities to think along common-sense and practical lines. The only way to learn to think is to think. The college offers to teach a man how. . . . Some college bred men have considered an education to be an accumulation of data. They have sought to keep the intellectual food served out by their professors, in cold storage, for future use, when it was intended for immediate consumption and consequent intellectual growth. It is this false conception of the value of their assets, their belief in knowledge as an end instead of a means to a power, that has wrecked so many college men when they entered business. . . . No people mere amusement or entertainment, or to supply a politician with an audience to which he may appeal for political support. The entertainment and amusement business belongs to the popular lecture bureau, and not to the state university, and the political speechifying should be handled by a campaign committee.

On the other hand, the possibility that a real educator may be occupying public office or may some day be favored with political honors should not be permitted to prevent him from doing university extension work. If, for example, some people should think Chancellor Avery or Dean Bessey would make a good governor and start to boom one of them for that office, that fact would not necessarily interfere with his availability and usefulness in his university work, either on the campus or in the field, and no amount of abstention from office-seeking will make good university teachers out of politicians who never saw the inside of a university and are lacking in the first requirements of a liberal education.

If the University of Nebraska is to conduct university extension courses let them be made for the benefit of those who listen, and not for the exploitation of those who talk whether they happen to be officeholders or ex-officeholders, or just looking for office. —Omaha Bee.

vard in college oratory. Aside from the fact that we fail to see exactly why it should be thirty-six in preference to thirty-five or thirty-seven years we believe that there may be something in the nominating speeches after all.

Despatches of yesterday announce that the co-eds of the Brazil high school have gone on a strike because the boys are not allowed to see them play basketball. This afternoon the co-eds of Nebraska will engage in a private game of basketball at which only the feminine portion of the university will be present. What a difference there is in co-eds.

A SPECIAL ISSUE.

It has been planned to have a literary number of the Daily Nebraskan published the first Thursday of every month under the auspices of the English Club. This number is to be a university and not a club affair, and contributions from any one connected with the university will be considered. It is desired to revive memories of the old days when the Kiote yelled at stated intervals and the still more distant period when the Hesperian shone once a fortnight in the literary firmament.

Contributions may be sent either to Miss Faye Hartley or Miss Estelle Morrison at Station A. Those not available for publication will be returned, if postage is sent with them.

IMPRACTICAL?

Way back in the days when we stood in the grocery store listening to the discussion around the big soft-coal stove and occasionally slipping a prune out of the case by the wall, we heard many things about education. In the dim light of the greasy coal oil lamp we heard tales of college and of college men tinged with the idea that such an education was impractical.

The grocery store is gone. Most of the men who gossiped and argued more serious problem confronts the American college today than that of working out a curriculum that will best equip its students to develop the vast enterprises which American industrial forces have established.

"Mr. Shonts is speaking from the business standpoint and is, perhaps, laying too much stress upon the value of mental training, as opposed to an acquisition of such knowledge as is, today, the mark of the educated man. Again, many will doubt the statement that it is the primary business of the college to furnish the equipment for business life, but the fact remains that a college education properly handled is a very valuable asset to a man who is looking forward to a business career, and that to such a man should lay the greater stress upon mental discipline. A well-trained mind is essential to success in every branch of human endeavor.

POLITICIANS AND UNIVERSITY EXTENSION.

The order of the Board of Regents of the University of Nebraska for the exclusion of the candidate for office from the list of lecturers to be sent out on university extension work will be a good thing if it eliminates the evil at which it is directed. This evil, however, does not consist in the booking as university extension lecturers of men who may be candidates for office, but in the distortion of the plan of university extension from what it originally was and ought to be.

True, university extension work brings to people who cannot be in attendance upon the class room something in the nature of instruction in the useful arts and sciences. While the university extension lecture must be more popular in form than the class room lecture, because the listeners have not the same educational groundwork, still it should have the same instructional object. In other words, university extension is not to furnish
