STUDENT PROFICIENCY DEPENDS ON TEACHERS

SPECIALISTS ARE NOT NARROW MINDED MEN OR WOMEN.

TEACHERS HAVE GREAT WORK

Kind of Students a College or School Produces Depends on Teachers is the Idea of Professor Grummann.

"I, for one, long for the time when we Americans may unite in just pride in the admiration of American literature, American architecture, American painting and American music. When all is said and done, these are the highest interests of a country." Such was the statement made by Professor Grummann, who delivered a lecture at 5 o'clock special convocation on "Efficiency in Education."
 In the course of his lecture, Professor Grummann criticized the instructor as being in most cases the direct cause of student inefficiency, adding that the time has come when we must demand that teaching should become a profession in the large sense; that teaching be undertaken by men and women who have a large outlook upon the world, a large general training, to which shall be added special proficiency in particular lines. Both types of training are as essential to the teachers as they are to members of the older professions.
Existence of a Dilemma.
 By a series of practical illustrations, Professor Grummann also proved the existence of a dilemma in educational institutions which probably account for so many "happy-go-lucky" students. The fact as stated is that the recitation of many students your heads doubtfully and exclaim: "This is the day of specialization." My answer is that broad training for efficiency is the only possible sound basis for specialization. The man who is only a specialist is absolutely nothing. The specialist is not a man who from the beginning digs a narrow groove and stays in that groove forever after. If he would succeed, he must bring a large and manifold experience to bear upon a special problem.

Training Not Too Broad.
 No specialist has ever lamented the fact that his training was too broad. One of the most successful criminal lawyers that this country has ever produced is known to have divided his time between law and general literature upon the proper assumption that a man must be an expert in human nature in order to be successful in a law practice.

 In conclusion, Professor Grummann said: "The schools that are really setting up the ideal of efficiency are those that are making the child the center of interest; those that are trying to train men and women who are efficient physically, mentally and spiritually. 'By their fruits, ye shall know them.' The teaching which I have suggested is difficult—it demands abundant training and insight. That the day of such training is at hand is attested by the great movement in this state in the direction of the professional training of teachers. The normal schools have done excellent frontier work and the university has seen the need of greater work in this direction, and as a consequence has established its 'Teachers' College.'"

 Anne Dennis, formerly a member of the class of 1912, is visiting sorority sisters at the Kappa Kappa Gamma house. She will return to her home in Omaha after attending the Phi Kappa Psi formal.
 The fiscal year of the university Y. M. C. A. closes on April 1st. New officers and committees will begin their work at that time. The nominating committee will meet at 1 o'clock today and its report will be submitted to the members at the mid-week meeting next Wednesday evening.
 Dr. Bessey of the department of botany has been requested to deliver a series of lectures on plant physiology at the meeting of the graduate school of agriculture which meets this summer at Ames. This is a meeting where professors of various colleges who teach agriculture and subjects allied with this study come together.
 Spring football will commence at the University of Missouri on March 21 and will continue for six weeks.

are mere motions of the lips; that the recitation which passes before them is a kind of dumb show past their comprehension. There are many recitations of their kind in which a child assimilates absolutely nothing. Nevertheless it is dragged over the mental operations at break-neck speed and becomes dazed and unfit for mental work of any kind. If its vitality is low, it becomes an excellent subject for St. Vitus dance and its future is wrecked.
 At the end of the school year, just as the student passes from the hands of the instructor, he or she sees that it needed training in self expression, encouragement in self assertion, training which it did not receive because of an inability on the part of the teacher to diagnose the case properly and in time. It is quite possible, however, that the revelations may be of a still more disconcerting nature; that a number of students have steadily receded while under this teacher's supervision, largely because something was at work which he or she could not detect.
Teacher Works Under a System.
 Immediately following this statement, however, the professor partially exonerated the teacher in the following words: "Let it be understood that I do not blame this teacher personally. She works under a system which is based upon proficiency in the subject, not upon the ultimate efficiency of the pupil. If she were to neglect the subject in order to treat the pupil in a more scientific manner, she would probably come to grief. This insistence upon proficiency is quite proper if properly understood. Efficient pupils will be proficient, but to make this proficiency the aim of instruction is as absurd as the course of the physician who exhausts all of his art in having a patient acquire skill in taking medicine or carrying out hygienic gymnastics skillfully."
 Another very interesting stand taken by Professor Grummann was that relative to the professional man, in which he said: "Many of you shake
