Who knows but what some of the buildings made necessary by the rapid growth of the university may be secured. The ground north of the present campus with the necessary buildings would do wonders in the way of placing Nebraska in a position to cope with the results of her rapid growth.

But not the least factor to be considered is the action of the committee appointed by the board of regents in sending plans of the ground to a landscape architect in Boston. Mr. Rutan visited Nebraska some time ago and looked over the present campus with an eye to improvements in its appearance. If any buildings are constructed, if any work is to be done, it will be along the right lines. The buildings will be arranged with some attention being paid to their appearance in relation to each other. The campus will be laid out with an eye to its beauty. In a word the scenery which confronts the student in his daily grind will be made beautiful. The value of this cannot be overestimated. It draws him to the university and makes him once and for all a part of Nebraska.

APPRECIATION.

Colonel Bills raised the Jack Best fund to $350, the amount required to send the old trainer to England. Mr. Bills' generosity is indicative of that displayed by the alumni all over the country. Whenever a Nebraska alumna was located who kept in touch with the affairs of his alma mater, there the true spirit of loyalty to Nebraska and the true appreciation of what she had done for them was expressed in a donation toward the fund. All of us are in a hurry. In fact most of us are in such a hurry that we never wake up to the value of the men about us until we have received the diploma.

THE TINKLE OF A COW-BELL.

The village of Crete lay peacefully sunning itself beside the meandering Blue. Not a sound disturbed the sylvan silence. Way off across the river came the silver tinkle of a cow bell. A little boy was paddling barefooted in the shallows by the mill; the first barefooted boy of the season.

Up on the third floor of University hall the dust drifted silently across the bars of sunlight as they filtered through the ill-washed windows. The student scarcely heard the drowsy monotone of the recitation—his head drooped—came up with a jerk—drooped again. Way off across the river he heard the silver tinkle of a cow bell. Crumpled in his pocket was a letter from the chancellor.

THE CAMPUS.

Everything grows in March, even the plans for the university campus. The old iron fence is no longer sufficient to inclose Nebraska's state university. Soon it will take on the appearance of a small inclosed garden plot in comparison with the greater campus.

 CHICAGO GLEE CLUB
 TOMORROW EVENING

University and received his training there. It is seldom that the students of the university are enabled to hear a baritone of Mr. Erickson's calibre.

One of the best features of the Chicago Glee Club is Oswald G. Stark. Mr. Stark is a 'cellist, one of the few real 'cellists en tour today. He is still a very young man, but he has attained an excellence on the 'cello that is remarkable.

The Chicago Glee Club is being brought here by the University of Nebraska Glee Club. The local organization, although very young, is a very industrious one. It believes that an interest in glee clubs must be aroused in Nebraska University and that there is no better way of arousing this interest than by bringing one of the best college glee clubs here for a concert.

Local Club Benefit.

The members of the local club are selling tickets for tomorrow's concert and report that the tickets are selling rapidly. In supporting the concert tomorrow night the students of the university will in effect be supporting their own club.

The club met Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock in the Temple, at which time rules for the conduct of the club were adopted. It purposes to establish a permanent organization with a membership not to exceed sixty men. Out of this number the glee club, which will make the tours, will be selected. Membership is open to all men of the university and school of music. After June of this year only freshmen and sophomores can be prospective members.

The club will meet twice, at 7 p. m. Wednesdays and 5 p. m. Fridays, in the Temple. Credit will be given as in any university class, though the
