THE WEATHER.

Yesterday was the twenty-first day of March, the spring equinox. The equinox has been ushered in with the usual storms and atmospheric disturbances. The storm center has been located in the college of law and its effects have been felt in various parts of the campus. Strange lassitude has characterized the student atmosphere and will be followed by a calm which, according to predictions, will continue for a week. After the calm—predictions fail to carry us that far. Let us hope for settled weather.

PHI BETA KAPPA.

The culmination, the crowning the pluck and the energy to carry his course with honor. He has not been whirled away by the furies that so often carry a weaker man far away from his college course. He may have played and played hard, but—he has also worked and worked hard. We can hardly admire a failure. We seldom admire a mediocre man or woman. But we do admire one who succeeds.

Phi Psi vs. Delta Tau.

This evening at 8 o'clock the members of the Phi Kappa Psi and Delta Tau Delta fraternity basketball teams will meet in the armory to decide the championship of the interfraternity basketball league.

Both teams have won all the games on their respective sides and this game decides which team will hold the first place pennant.

Forestry Students Leave.

Fifteen undergraduates of the forest department left Sunday morning for Halsey, to be gone two weeks. Their work there will be field planting and nursery work, together with a little in the reforestation of the sandhills. This work applies on the amount of required practice or field work necessary for graduation.

Rosencrans and C. A. Bennett, '11. The annual banquet was held Saturday evening at the Lincoln, at which many alumni members were present. O. J. Shaw, '08, of Aurora acted as toastmaster.

TRACK MEN BACK

Cornhuskers Make Good Showing at the Kansas City Meet Saturday.

The members of the squad of track men who represented the University of Nebraska at the Kansas City meet last Saturday evening returned yesterday. The men of the squad made a good showing and are satisfied with the result of the meet. The chief glory of the Nebraska men was winning the relay race against eight teams who contested for this event. The Nebraska men had the satisfaction of defeating the fast Drake team which was conceded to win the race, and the Cornhusker men are now the champion relay team of the Missouri Valley.

Two of the Nebraska men qualified in the semi-finals and the finals of the fifty-yard dash, but they were unable to win places in this event. About fifty entries were made for this event alone. In the hurdles the Nebraska man, MacDonald, was handicapped to such an extent that he was unable to win a place, although with the handicap against him he made a showing worthy of commendation. The work of all the Nebraska track men is now concentrated on the Omaha meet, which will be held April 1st.

You Won't Feel Right If You Are Not Wearing the Latest in Dress Accessories.

"Furnish-ers to Men Who Know"

The men you see at church, on the street, in the theatres during the next week will be wearing the very newest and most attractive Dress Accessories that can be found on the market. It has reached that period of the year when men make the most radical change in their dress and invariably it is their custom to become thoroughly posted before making their purchases.

We are rapidly gaining a reputation for carrying one of the most up-to-date stocks of Men's Dress Apparel that can be found in the city. This undoubtedly is due to the fact that the department is entirely new; new management; new fixtures; new thoroughly posted clerks and last and most important an absolutely new stock throughout the entire department.

We invite your inspection and criticism assuring you that you will never be urged to purchase. Special attention is called to our Window Displays, clearly illustrating the very latest for Easter Wear.

event of the senior year is, to many, the announcement of the Phi Beta Kappa elections. There is the student who has worked hard, sacrificed much, and gained the coveted key. He is happy. There is the student who has not worked as hard, perhaps, but who has taken a lively interest in the world about him. To him the key comes as an incident in his college career. He too is happy. Then there is the student who has been compelled to support himself throughout his college life; perhaps he has been ill for a time; perhaps he has had special interests in his college life which have caused him to neglect a part of his course; or perhaps he got a wrong start as a freshman; he gets no key. He is maybe unhappy. Lastly, there is the student who has deliberately neglected his work. Perhaps he too feels a twinge of regret at the deliberate loss of the key.

Phi Beta Kappa, it is safe to say, is beyond the reach of a few of the students who attend the university. It is the highest scholastic honor to be given to an academic student. But it takes a sacrifice to secure the honor. Some are unwilling to make the sacrifice. Some are prevented from making it. Those who are unwilling to make it can only feel regret, if those things which they were unwilling to give up for the Phi Beta Kappa key were of less value than the key. Those who were prevented from making the sacrifice through other, more necessary sacrifices, should feel no regret. It is unavoidable.

Yet it is inherent in man to desire recognition. Phi Beta Kappa is recognition of scholarship, pure and simple. The student body admires the scholar. If does not admire the grind, for it feels that he is losing more than he gains. But the Phi Beta Kappa key does not necessarily brand a student as a grind. It means that the student has merely had the grit,
