Spanish Politeness.
 The Spanish grandee is about the most polite man in the world, for he has no business cares. Politeness and cigarettes are his only business. San Antonio, Tex., is the most charmingly polite town upon this continent, yet San Antonio is a cosmopolitan city. There are almost as many foreigners as native southern gentlemen and it is also a good business town; still, one sees nothing but the softest, gentlest manners and courtesy and the attentions to ladies are always beyond question or reproach. The explanation is not far to seek. It was not long ago and is still to an extent the case, that most disputes ended in gunfire and burnt powder, with a corpse and sometimes two or three lying around littering the landscape.

A Serious Precedent.
 The chorus girl regarded the gilded youth thoughtfully.
 "Let us hike away and be married at once, Tottie," he cried.
 She shook her peroxide frizzes.
 "No, Freddie, not yet awhile," she answered. "Not until mother can find out whether your papa is one of the Knox kind or not."
