Charles Emery Barber, '04, writes from the Throop Polytechnic Institute at Pasadena, Cal., that a Nebraska club is forming in southern California. He writes to Registrar Harrison asking for points in writing the constitution of the club. The idea is to have the constitution as nearly as possible similar to the other Nebraska clubs that have formed.

The University Presbyterian students are requested to meet at 4:50 u. m. on Friday, April 22, for a large photograph. At the next general assembly of the Presbyterian church, held at Atlantic City next month, there will be an exhibit of photographs of buildings and groups of Presbyterian students of the large state universities. It is desired that Nebraska be well represented.

The house that is being moved into the space between Alpha Phi and Delta au houses is causing considerable worry on the part of both its next door neighbors. The Delta Taua are sorry to be deprived of their handy play ground and their present next door neighbors, while the Alpha Phis are troubled to know whether the newcomers will be congenial. Won't somebody kindly move in and relieve the suspense?

President Nichols of Dartmouth has said: "The college in all its relations is the most human and humanizing influence in all of our civilization, and year by year its gains in this direction are substantial."

NEBRASKA CO-ED ON HATS
 Special Correspondent Writes of the Changing Tendency in Head Adornment.
 (Special by "Madam Vass.")
 So much has been said about big hats, that a joke about a big hat is no longer a joke. But from remarks heard about the campus, the "feeling" is there just the same. The feminine hat question is still a live one.
 It is noticeable, however, since this spring's edition of "creations" has appeared on the campus and in the classroom, that the small hat has a place in popularity along with the large. "Automobile bonnets" and "turbans" make it possible even for backseaters to see the top of Professor Persinger's head in American history, and it is reported that a freshman English "lit" student recognized Professor Stuff on the street one day this week.
 The Daily Missourian in a recent article on women's hats, calls attention to the remarkable variety of styles, and suggests that this may be due to the different localities from which the girls come. But one of our own fair co-eds, in discussing the subject, declares that this is quite improbable.
 "It isn't that, or the theory would hold good in former years. Why, two summers ago we all had to wear 'Merry Widows,' or we were perfect frights. A girl who was anybody wouldn't be seen in a tiny thing like that girl has on there. The variety in styles this season is due to mufin and rebellion; that's what it is. We've worn big hats when our faces were puny and thin, and pudgy hats when our faces were broad and thick, and tried to make people think we looked respectable, when we knew we hadn't a show in the world. Finally some of our sex at headquarters have rebelled, and now we can choose a hat that is becoming to us. We can show a little originality as well as style this year.
 Another Nebraska co-ed suggests that the wide choice afforded this season's hat buyers is indirectly the result of the popular growing tendency in women to rebel at a passive following of any sort, and to assert their own personality.
 The Daily Missourian further advances the theory in its blind groping after truth on this subject, that one reason may be "that many girls make their last year's hats do until they get home for the vacation, by putting new ribbons or feathers on them." But again the Nebraska co-ed disagrees.
 "I should say not!" said one. "I hope people haven't got that idea. If they knew the sacrifice and worry we undergo to provide ourselves with suitable hats each season, they would be more appreciative. Of course, we don't wait until we get home to buy our Easter bonnets. We wouldn't pass up the really classy bonnets here in Lincoln and wait until we get back to ———burg to buy one. The dear old town would be disappointed if I came home in June without a 'scandalous' new hat for public discussion."

 Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. Editor in Chief, Dr. W. T. Harris, former U. S. Com. of Education. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified: The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The Etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, its richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

The whole brigade of midshipmen at the National Naval Academy at Annapolis have been subjected to disciplinary restrictions as a result of giving an officer the "silence," which consists of a death-like stillness at meal time, when noise is ordinarily the feature. This is considered an affront towards the officer, and in this case the privilege of leaving the academy grounds was withdrawn for a number of days.

What is believed to be the first building in the country owned and occupied by a college undergraduate publication was opened when the Harvard Lampoon took formal possession of a new house on Mount Auburn street. The Lampoon is the oldest of the college funny papers, but hitherto it has had no quarters of its own. The new building was erected at a cost of about $40,000.
