ON TO OXFORD.
 In past year the men who represented this state at Oxford through the Rhodes scholarship which they have won, have brought credit both to their state and the institution in which they were formerly enrolled. This year the examinations will be held on the university campus, late in October. It is the duty of every man who feels that he has never accomplished anything in the development of the university except in the line of studies to take these tests. Here is your chance to make a reputation as lasting and as glorious as if it were made on the football field.

THE SOUTH-GATE CROWD.
 With registration week the usual group of students were gathered around the south gate. Their occupation was waiting for classes and smoking. Not that smoking should be criticised, but the place that the men of the university do it is not an aid to the reputation of the institution. The time is coming when a smoking room will be a necessity to this school. Eastern colleges allow the students to smoke on the campus and even in the corridors of the building. Here the men are not allowed to do so. Being a co-educational institution, this rule is a good one. But the men should have a room where they can go and spend their time between classes. It must come sooner or later, and it will be better for the university if the men have such a place to smoke and spend their time between classes. It is not as bad as strolling around the campus fence. The men will enjoy it more, and in fact a room of this sort has been found to be a necessity in many of the large universities of the east. The idea of making the south gate a place for the university smokers to loaf should be abolished. Give them a smoking room on the campus somewhere, and the men will use it.

FOOTBALL TICKETS.
 Many of the men and women of the university have taken advantage of the athletic tickets which have been placed on sale during the past week. This is an excellent opportunity for every member of the student body as well as the faculty of the university to see the athletic events of the university year at a small price. The university needs the support of everyone interested in the institution. Get your tickets now before they are taken off sale. You have the money now. Two weeks from today you may be broke. Skip a show or two and purchase an athletic ticket.

SILENCING AN OFFICER.
 A commissioned officer at the West Point military academy has been "silenced" by the cadets. This is considered an insult by the men occupying a superior position in that institution. As a result the war department has appointed a special board of inquiry to investigate the matter.

THURSDAY TEMPLE THEATRE

Freshman Assembly

MEMORIAL HALL 11 A. M.

When a number of students act in this manner, and do it in unison, something is wrong. At this institution some of the faculty members feel that students criticise them too severely. However, there must be something wrong when the men and women of this institution do work against the faculty. Perhaps it would be wise to see if the blame is not somewhere besides in the student body.

THE TEMPLE BOOK STORE.
 Students for the past three years have had the opportunity to have text books placed in their hands at cost plus the expense of handling these books. Previous to the time when the regents took this matter in hand the retail book stores in the city actually robbed the men and women in the university by making them pay enormous prices for books that they knew the students had to have. When the books are high at the Temple Book Store, pay the price and don't klick. You are getting the book at cost. If you think the price is high, think what you would have to pay if you purchased it of a retailer.

LIBRARY SEATS SOLD.
 Upper Classmen Charge Innocent Freshmen Fifteen Cents for Fake Seats.

The old custom of selling seats in the law library to the freshmen was not forgotten yesterday. At the close of one of the early morning classes in which one hundred and thirty-five of the embryo lawyers of the university were assembled, a few announced the sale of seats to incoming men. In response to the call several of the men "went down" in their pockets for the necessary fifteen cents. Seats were selling fast until the first purchased were again sold by the crowd of upper classmen and freshmen who were waiting to see the fun.

The committee on student affairs has placed hazing under the ban at Stanford. "Tubbing" and all interferences with the personal liberties of fellow students is prohibited. The "tying" contest is the only event of the sort that is sanctioned.

"A STUDENT'S SURPLUS TIME"

play business ability and sagacity. Thus, for instance, let him who expects to become eventually a business man devote his leisure hours to the efficient handling of student enterprises, not from the standpoint of one who wants to make a few dollars in an easy way, but one who wishes to make a record for careful financing, admirable bookkeeping, and careful accounting.

"Probably no line of work has more profoundly influenced the student's after-life than the time spent in the debating society. In no way can the student learn to think clearly on his feet; in no way can he acquire the art of self-expression, so well as in the debating club.

"In this catalog of opportunities, for the use of spare time, I would not neglect athletics. I have not much patience with the student who wastes much time discussing athletics, in reading athletic 'dope' and indulging in athletic gossip, but I do have a profound respect for the athlete who trains himself properly for the athletic events, who so conducts his life that he may win; who keeps a clear head, a vigorous body, and a good conscience.

Student Life Criticised.
 "The student's life is criticised more justly on the ground of being aimless and purposeless than from any other cause. Nevertheless much of this aimlessness and drifting on the part of young people is traceable to a natural condition which is to be directed rather than suppressed. They may waste their time in 'baby talk,' as President Jordan puts it, or they may be comparing notes in regard to their various worthy activities, sharpening their wits upon each other and practicing attack and defense, which will come very useful to them in their contest with the world. The friendship, formed during college life, the brilliant discussion and repartee, the clash of mind with mind, represent values which are not to be despised. Only would I say let your conversation with your fellows, even when you are doing what is popularly termed 'loafing,' have an intellectual quality worthy of students. Do not condescend to spend hours together on the same mental plane as that of the untrained and the unthinking.

"Instances without number might be cited where students have made worthy and effective use of their surplus time. Whether the student be in the college of arts, teachers, engineering, agriculture, law or medicine, equal opportunities are open. Let me in closing summarize my thoughts—earn your 125 hours honestly and fairly—this is your primary course, but remember that there is also a secondary course or supplementary course to be considered, and one which may form the basis of your success in life.

"I have no confidence whatever in the ability of any one to attain eminence of any sort in life unless he shows some evidence of the power to be developed later, during his college course. Mediocre in all respects for the next four years, means that you have deliberately doomed yourselves to mediocrity. The four years before you are the most critical years of your life; the habits, good and bad, which will govern you, will be largely formed during this time, and the college world is in a sense the microcosm of the larger world, and the college life that you lead a forecast of your future career."
