STUDENT TICKETS.

The football season opens today. If you do not hold one of the student tickets, which admits you to all the athletic events of the year, you do not realize what you will be unable to save before many weeks are past. These tickets will be taken off sale after a few of the football games have been played, and you will be out a considerable sum of money if you desire to attend all the events of the year. By purchasing a student ticket you will be benefited, but first of all your university and university athletics will be benefited.

SHADY POLITICS.

With the opening of the campaigns for class presidencies, a natural tendency develops to do all in one's power to "pull" votes. The campaigns which are being waged by the candidates at the present time are the cleanest that the university has known for a number of years.

All the men who are running for office have shown that they are true gentlemen and have worked for their election without trying to "sling mud."

However an exchange treats the matter very frankly, in which it says:

"With the approach of the class elections in all the colleges there comes to the mind of many the political tactics that have often been present in former university elections, tactics while not being absolutely dishonest savor of unfairness and coercion.

"Although clean, open and fair-minded campaigning for candidates for office based on their fitness for the positions sought is inevitable, there is liable to be too much of the kind of politics called 'making deals.'

"Whenever an individual secures an office by means of lobbying on the part of his friends, both the esteem held of the office and the man is detracted from in a measure that is greater or less according to the objectionable features of the promotion.

"Every student, every candidate and every participant in any manner in any university election should see to it that his acts and motives are above suspicion."

Nebraska is not the only school having paths on the campus. However, we should try to overcome this habit and stay on the walks.

The I. S. C. Student of Ames says: "Keep out of the paths that are making. This has been a familiar notice around the campus. Familiarity breeds contempt evidently, for there are even now many paths that have advanced beyond the stage of making, and there are others that show the process of making. A little thought, a little care, and these paths which mar the appearance of the campus need not be. As an evidence of genuine college spirit, let us all exercise the needed care and the paths will soon disappear."

The Scarlet and Black of Grinnell also speaks:

"A citizen of Grinnell has asked us to call attention to the practice which is common among many students of cutting across the yards and parkings about town. This is a source of annoyance to many residents, who take a just pride in trying to keep their lawns neat and attractive.

"The grievance is due almost entirely to thoughtlessness on the part of the students, and doubtless, now that their attention is called to it, they will steal an extra minute or two from the rush of the college day, and 'stay on the walk.'"

DEMAND FOR SCIENCE TEACHERS

Subjects Given Which Will Fit Men and Women for Lucrative Positions.

Before the opening of school this fall even more than in years previous there has been a demand for science teachers in the schools of Nebraska greatly beyond the supply, and this in spite of better salaries offered than ever before. This demand has, however, been largely for the all-around science teacher, not for the specialist in any one branch; for one with an actual teaching experience, or its equivalent through special training courses. For any such position the graduate of the university may easily have preference where teaching experience or special preparation fits for that instruction and training through laboratory work suited to the needs of high school boys and girls.

The teachers college this year has undertaken to provide for such preparation beyond what has been attempted before. Rooms 5, 6 and 7 in the basement of the Temple are being fitted up for teaching physical geography, agriculture, botany, physics and chemistry under conditions not unlike what may be met in the high schools of the state. Those taking courses 33-34 of educational theory and practice have opportunity to acquire skill in actual teaching, while courses 27-28 (15 physics) and 29-30 (29 chemistry) by Prof. Brownell in room 5 have to do with the special difficulties confronting the teacher of science in high school work generally, especially in choice and adaptation of subject-matter and the manner of instruction for the physical sciences in high school work. Work in these teachers courses, and in the science methods, starts late owing to the delays incident to refitting and furnishing those rooms for their new uses.

RICE GROWN ON CAMPUS.

Plants Commencing to Head Out—Botanists Interested in Experiment.

The little patch of rice, which has been growing north of the green house all summer, is just beginning to assert itself. It has remained there unnoticed for several months, but just a few days ago it began to form heads and shoot them up in the air. This attracted the attention of the botanists and others, for it is no common occurrence to find a bed of some two dozen rice plants growing right in the heart of an American city. The small rice farm on the campus does not resemble a real Japanese field, but it is such an uncommon sight that it is attracting no small amount of attention from both faculty members and students. The plants are about three feet high and have heads on them which resemble those of the wheat. There are about a dozen of the plants growing in a small garden of only a few square feet.

For the last few years the botanists of the faculty have had a rice farm in this same place. A piece of hose is connected with the water works of the green house so that water may be transported to the farm and kept running all of the time during the hot summer days. Only a few days ago the water was shut off. If frost does not kill the plants, Dr. Bessy thinks that he will have a small harvest of rice this season. If it becomes necessary, a few of the plants will be transplanted into pots and the rice matured in the greenhouse. In past years rice has been ripened right out in the open air and some of it has been of very good quality.

HILL TO MINNESOTA?

is Most Likely Candidate for the Presidency.

Albert Ross Hill, president of Missouri University, is again being considered as a candidate for the presidency of the Minnesota institution, says the Minnesota Daily.

Last year when Dr. Hill was approached on the subject he was retained by Missouri authorities by the promise of the state of more liberal financial support for their institution. At the Missouri election this fall a constitutional amendment will be voted upon authorizing the legislature to levy a three mill tax for the support of the university. If this amendment passes Dr. Hill will be under obligation to remain. Otherwise he will be free to accept any offers he may receive.

The board of regents of the University of Minnesota have decided to postpone all action in regard to choosing a successor for President Northrop until their December meeting, when the result of this election is known.

It is not at all certain that Dr. Hill will be the choice of the regents even if he is in a position to accept, but he is at present the most promising candidate.—Daily Kansan.
