

PLAN FOR A BIG SCRAP

mores and freshmen have been selected and are at work lining up men for the various contests. The entire supervision on the eventful day is in charge of upper classmen. The Olympics will be held on the morning of Saturday, October 29, at 9 o'clock probably on the athletic field.

Some Changes.

There will probably be some changes in the line-up of events this year and in the number of scores to be awarded for the various contests. There was some dissatisfaction expressed last year by students who thought that too much depended upon which class won the free-for-all, "battle royal." The events last year consisted of a Marathon run of about three miles from some point at the end of a street car line to the campus, a tug-of-war, three wrestling matches, three boxing contests, and last of all the big free-for-all class rush.

The real fun came when last year the two classes started from either end of the football field in a mad rush to get possession of a piece of canvas, about ten feet square, which was in the center of the field, guarded by five stalwart warriors of each of the classes. Small bunches of men fought to keep each other away from the center of activity, the canvas. One man could be seen holding an opponent down and at the same time trying to trip another. The dust which filled the air fairly choked some of the contestants, but they scrapped on. Slugging or hitting of any kind was barred and every man was on his honor as a Nebraskan to play the game fairly and squarely. Like a whirlpool in the ocean, the canvas moved back and forth, but was suddenly rushed across the goal line and the freshmen had been defeated, and could not wear class caps. It was a real battle, and when the dust had cleared away every man knew that there had been something doing, and what was more, that he had been in the fight.

Sophomores Anxious.

The class of 1913 which as a freshman class met defeat, is determined this year it will come out the victor. The first year classmen promise that they will give the second year students a good scrap and that the sophomores will know that they had an opponent, when the battle is over. In three of the eastern colleges and at Nebraska Wesleyan university the freshmen have this season cleaned up the second year men. Nebraska students are wondering if the class of 1914 will come out on top October 29.

MINNESOTA IS READY.

Gophers Anticipated a Battle Royal in Today's Game.

Minneapolis, Minn.—This afternoon the Minnesota eleven went through but a slight warming up, followed by a long talk by Dr. Williams. From end to end there is not an apparent weakness in the maroon and gold line and the back field, based on its showing so far this season, stands unequalled in the country. The followers are confident that the team will be returned victorious over the invading forces from the valley, but those who are wont to not let their loyalty best their judgment feel that there is to be a battle royal on tomorrow and that the outcome is in great doubt.

The chances are that conditions will play an important part in the contest, and if the Cornhuskers have the edge in this respect on the Gophers then the Cole army is likely to be returned the victors. The Nebraska team is quartered at the West hotel and the lobby is being constantly thronged with those interested to catch a look at the Nebraska giants. Every man on the squad is reported as being in the best of shape and fit for a long and gruelling struggle.

The members of the eleven, though not outspoken, show by their conversation that they fail to see where Minnesota has anything on them, and appear confident of more than an even chance of winning. Cole had nothing more to say other than the team came up to play football and would give the best that they had, but he appeared to believe it was good enough to win. One of the largest crowds that has ever witnessed a game with the Cornhuskers will be on hand and extra seats are being erected this afternoon to handle the overflow.
