OCTOBER 25, 1910.

During the football game Saturday, over excitement on the part of the crowd of spectators caused them to start to swing the bleachers. This structure is but a temporary one, and great care should be taken or another action of this kind may cause its collapse. It is not strong at the best, and when the whole thing will swing from ten to twelve inches it is time that the occupants started to vacate.

The rooting Saturday was good, but it could be improved a great deal more. It must be admitted that everything was coming our way and that Denver had but little chance of scoring, but nevertheless we should appreciate the efforts of the players enough to cheer with a whole heart or not at all. Half-hearted rooting counts for naught. Let us see if we can do better next time.

It is one of the customs of this institution to show the football team that their efforts are appreciated. Day after day they work away perfecting plays and formations, as well as learning their signals, in their efforts to win victories for old Nebraska. You can show your appreciation of their efforts by attending the games and cheering the gridiron heroes on to victory, but your presence at the Cornhusker banquet is needed more than at any of the games. Be sure and save this one night of the whole year out for the furtherance of Nebraska spirit and Nebraska athletics. Come prepared to pay homage to the Missouri Valley champions, and show every member of the team that they are part of the school that is needed—first, for the honor of the Scarlet and Cream; second, for the fame they bring to the university; third, for the memories that they will keep of old Nebraska, and fourth, for the development of Nebraska spirit—the spirit that works, fights and wins.

MEDICAL SOCIETY ELECTION.

Organization of "Medics" Gets Ready for the Work of the Year.

The Medical Society of the University of Nebraska met Friday evening and elected the following officers:

President, Arthur L. Smith of Dunlap, Iowa.

Vice-president, Blaine A. Young of Malvern, Iowa.

Secretary, James B. Williams of Wood River, Nebraska.

Treasurer, Miss Bessie Mason of Beaver City, Nebraska.

This society is an organization to membership of which all students in the college of medicine taking regular medical work are eligible, and the aim of which is to promote social intercourse among its members, as well as to secure speakers who will be able to address the members on topics of general interest which do not fall within the scope of any prescribed courses. The society has been in existence since the years when only preparatory medical work was given in the university, though it has recently not been active. A committee on revision of the constitution was appointed. The number of regular medical students in

The university of Nebraska urges all young people, who can, to take a four-year high school course and prepare to enter college. Some, however, cannot spend the time required by the high school and college course. For the benefit of these, the University established, a number of years ago, the a little bit of trouble in the bleachers Saturday is not known. Whoever he was, he should have been accompanied to the gate and put off the grounds. A cowardly attack of this kind for no apparent reason should not be tolerated among the student body. Whether he was a student or not, the university men should have taken the matter into their own hands in defense of one of the student body and shown the party who acted so crudely that his presence outside the athletic field was more desired than it was inside.

A lover of athletics at the university has had a chance to be satisfied with the interest in this line of university activities this fall. Football of course is the center of interest, but tennis, cross-country, fall track and basketball added to it, the season's prospects are that Nebraska has entered upon a new era for better athletics.

Crowley, the Denver right half, certainly deserves all the praise that he can get. Calling signals for his plays, as well as acting as captain of the Ministers, the plucky little Mountaineer showed that he has the right spirit in fighting to the end for his school, although they were losing. A number of times he had to ask for time out, but nevertheless he came back with a vengeance which caused the rooters to rise in their seats, for fear that he would get away from some of the Cornhuskers and carry the ball across the Nebraska goal.

The Cornhusker banquet, which comes December 2, should be patronized by every man in the university.

The regulation black cats, jack-o'-lanterns and witches were present in full force. The fortune telling and Hallowe'en games afforded an abundance of merriment.

The club gave its regular program of readings, talks, and musical numbers. Fifteen new members were added to the roll. Plans were laid for a participation in the coming County Fair. At its next fortnightly meeting the club will be entertained by the ladies of "The Komenky House," 319 South 26th street.

"BREAKFAST BACON SPECIAL."

Better Hog Raising to Be Preached in Nebraska.

The "Breakfast Bacon Special," first originated in Iowa, is now crossing the state borders into Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and Minnesota, and likewise arousing much enthusiasm among the hog raisers. This special was first termed the Iowa Better Hog Train, after which it was popularly dubbed the "Breakfast Bacon Special." The train consists of seven cars, provided by the Rock Island lines for the exclusive use of experts, who travel through the state lecturing and demonstrating concerning the feed, care, shelter, and management of hogs. The special, in its object, corresponds to the "Better Seed Wheat" special recently run through Oklahoma. The movement was first prompted by the alarming shortage of hogs at six of the chief packing centers during 1909 and 1910. Therefore the agricultural department of the Rock Island lines, with the co-operation of the agricultural colleges of Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri started a

Lincoln, including those from the first year of the six-year combined course onward, all of whom are eligible to membership in the society, is 115, and from this number, under the leadership of the efficient officers elected, will no doubt be recruited an active organization, of great value to the members themselves and also to the college in which they are registered.

Elmer Hills, 1909, was a campus visitor Saturday. Mr. Hills is principal of the public schools at Fairbury, Neb.
