NEBRASKA OUTPLAYS KANSAS

BY A SCORE OF 6 TO 0 COLE'S CORNHUSKERS TAKE THE MEASURE OF KENNEDY'S JAYHAWKERS

Kansas Fights Bravely in the Shadow of Her Goal Posts, But Owen Frank Goes Over the Chalk Mark in the Last Quarter and Brings Victory to the Scarlet and Cream—Kansans are Outplayed but are the First to Congratulate Their Conquerors

Nebraska brought home the bacon. Kansas went down to defeat before the tremendous onslaught of the Cornhuskers Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0, outplayed, outgeneraled and outclassed at every point of the game. And in winning from Kansas, the Nebraskans secured a strange hold on the Missouri Valley championship.

Never in the history of the football relations of the two schools have they engaged in such a battle, and not for years has the University of Nebraska turned out such a wonderful football machine. Kansas was played to a stand-still. The score does not show how great the Scarlet and Cream victory was. Seldom were the Jayhawkers able to push over onto Nebraska territory, while the Cornhuskers kept the ball on Kansas ground, often near the Kansas line, practically the whole sixty minutes.

Every Man a Star.

Every man on the Nebraska eleven did his part, tearing holes in the Kansas line, breaking up the Kansans interference, and holding like the proverbial stone wall whenever the Jayhawkers attempted to go through. Man to man, absolutely without exception, the Kansans were outclassed, game with more or less doubt as to the game Nebraska would play were soon put at their ease, and by the time the game was well under way, and Nebraska was pounding the Jayhawkers back farther and farther toward their goal, all doubts were dispelled. It took only a few minutes after the first whistle for the Cornhuskers to show beyond question that they were the winners.

Past Defeats Wiped Out.

The defeats of 1908 and 1909 were more than wiped out by the victory Saturday. In the game Saturday the Jayhawkers were beaten and beaten bad, Nebraska having the advantage individually and as a team. But in the game here last year the two teams were evenly matched, playing a 0 to 0 game, with neither team having the advantage, until a few minutes from the end, when Johnson broke away for a brilliant fifty-yard run for the touchdown that won the game. Johnson beat Nebraska. As a team, the Jayhawkers did not win much of a victory.

Kansas could not gain around the ends, Channer and Lofgren playing their positions in a way to make the Nebraska rooters get on their feet and howl with joy. Neither could the Jayhawkers force their way through the Nebraska line for more than a few yards, which was during the first quarter. The linemen held their ground with the strength of so many Warner, Minor, Owen Frank and Rathbone, Cornhusker backs, were the cleverest quartet that Nebraska has had in years. The greatest gains of the game were made by these four men around the ends, putting up an interference which kept the Jayhawkers guessing, carrying the ball for ten, twenty and thirty-yard runs with apparent ease. Rathbone, although he is far from the heaviest man on the team, broke through the Kansas line time and again for substantial gains. Owen Frank starred on end runs and on breaking interference and bringing down Jayhawk runners. Minor played a perfect interference game and more than once got away around the ends. Warner was in his glory breaking through the ends of the line and stopping runners for losses. Kansas suffered a total loss of nine yards in three downs.

Warner a Good General.

Warner handled the team like a veteran—he is a veteran now—and sent his plays in so rapidly and with such cool and unerring judgment that the

and although they put up a wonderful game themselves, they were not match for the Cornhuskers.

A comparison of ground gained during the game will show to some extent how badly the Kansans were beaten. In seventy-seven downs Nebraska made a total of 373 yards. Kansas gained seventy-seven yards in twenty-nine downs. Nebraska made fifteen first downs, while the Jayhawkers got away with only four. Nebraska returned kicks for 101 yards, while Kansas made returns for only two yards.

Kansas Had a Good Line.

The Jayhawkers will have to be given credit for their line, and the remarkable defense it put up a critical stages of the battle. Four times, after the Cornhuskers had swept their way down the field and threatened to cross the line, the Kansans held them for downs and saved themselves the ignominy of an even worse defeat. The lone touchdown was made when Owen Frank went through the line and over the goal from the five-yard line, after just such a steady march from the center of the field. Owen Frank kicked his own goal.
