DECEMBER 8, 1910.

Each year the University of Nebraska graduates a large number of young men and women, and these students scatter all over the United States. Locating, many of them in the same city, there gradually grows up between them an acquaintanceship which becomes greater and greater when the Scarlet and Cream institution enters in. The recent formation of University of Nebraska clubs at Portland, Ore., and at St. Louis is an have conscientiously avoided any actual disloyalty in the past.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To the members of the English club, we wish to say that this is the best expression of real true university spirit that we have received from an organization of this nature during the present year.

May it be possible for all the students of the school to view the matter in the same light as the members of the English club. To the members of the Tegner club we offer the suggestion that perhaps they would be considered as more loyal students to the university if they would look at the matter the same way that the English club has; in fact they will have done all that could be expected of any loyal university organization.

This school is open to young men living upon farms who cannot arrange to attend the regular School of Agriculture.

It affords farmers of all ages an opportunity to study the question of soil fertility and of farm management so as to increase the yield per acre on their farms.

The instruction in breeds of live stock, judging cattle, sheep, swine, and horses, and the lectures on the management and feeding of live stock are of such a character as to add greatly to the profits of those in the live stock business.

The Department of Dairy Husbandry gives practical instruction in farm dairying. Lectures in Forestry and Horticulture deal with these subjects and show how farmers can engage in their production in such a way as to reap profits therefrom.

Practical work in the operation of farm machinery is given by experts. Lectures are given on the common diseases of farm animals. The serum treatment for hog cholera is explained.

The registration fee is $4.

Board and room can be obtained for from $4 to $4.50 per week. Thirty-five or forty dollars will be the total cost of attending the entire course.

For further information address the principal of the School of Agriculture, University Farm, Lincoln, Neb.

example of the interest graduates of the Cornhusker school take in their school after they have completed their university career. There is an unseen spirit which draws men and women of Nebraska into a mutual fellowship. The spirit of the school is of such a lasting quality that the men and women, no matter where they may be, seem to have a love for their school which cannot be outgrown even after they have graduated, and have been separated from the institution for many years. The spirit is something which is a matter not alone of principle, but it is from the heart. This is the true Nebraska spirit which must be cultivated in our undergraduate days, and when we become staid old grads that love of Nebraska and the Scarlet and Cream will be so strong that it cannot be outgrown.

The Daily Nebraskan:

It has been thought by some that the holding of a regular meeting of the English club last Saturday evening expressed disloyalty to a general college interest.

The executive committee considered that there would be no real conflict with the banquet, as over 75 per cent of the members are women, and it was not expected that any men, wishing to attend the banquet, would change their plans.

The club sincerely regrets that there was even an appearance of disloyalty to a large college interest and will avoid this in the future as they fore a demand for the tickets is expected.

The admission to university informals is usually only a dollar and a quarter, but the engineers have dared to put it a quarter higher, in the hopes of paying out on a smaller crowd. The dance will be given at the Lincoln hotel on December 10th. H. C. Cusack is chairman of the committee and H. N. Cain is to be the master of ceremonies.

A two-year correspondence course in pharmacy has been established at Kansas.

At Brown university, grandstands are inspected by the city authorities before each game.

"Simple Cynthia" will be presented this season by the Princeton Triangle club.

The Michigan Union will present "The Crimson Chest" on four evenings in December.
