There is talk of moving the university out to the farm. That is almost as good as moving it to the capitol grounds.

school after a certain length of time?"

The loss of these men this year, added to the loss of Professor Ross, Professor Hill, Dean Pound and many other men must be taken into consideration when this all-perplexing question arises. There is a seriousness connected with the matter which cannot be overlooked.

The loss of one big man alone hurts the school. Our critics are numerous and when the resignation of a prominent university official is noted, they vie with each other in an attempt to see who can make the most noise over the unfortunate occurrence.

Nebraska is a growing university, and the loss of a few leaders is a handicap to the institution as a whole. Its growth is hindered, and to gain and recover the ground lost while that handicap was placed upon it, greater effort must be made.

A team of horses may be able to pull a certain amount, but when an extra burden is added, something is liable to break. So with the university. Let us do all in our power to lighten the load and keep the leaders and workers with us, so that they will not resign, and thus the danger of something breaking will be obviated.

Among the list of university employees there are many who have been with us for years. The early days of the institution saw men like John Uhl, Jack Best and many others at their present duties. The efforts of these men to aid students have long gone unappreciated. Let us make some effort to show them that the student body has a big heart. Sending Jack Best to England was just one thing. Would it not be a good thing to extend it further?

How is this for "crust"? Iowa says that having won both debates in the Central Debating league they have a right "to look down on Nebraska, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota." Now, Mr. Hawkeye, we hate to be rude, but it is time that you were informed that you are mistaken. Nebraska also won both of her debates in the same league and is just as much deserving to a gaze at Iowa down on the ground as that institution seems to think it has on the Cornhusker school.

The resignation of E. H. Clark, Professor Haecker and other prominent men connected with the university brings to the minds of the students a question, which has been asked time and time again by the undergraduate body. The question is this: "Why is the university unable to keep good men after they have been with the
