the attention of the students to that much-discussed question, "Summer Baseball."

The matter is one of dollars and cents, pure and simple, but it means a great deal to the average college man.

The natural ability of an American boy to play baseball is one which can often be turned into profit. If this boy is able to earn money by playing baseball in the summer months he should be allowed to do so. Every student will agree to that. Then where does the objection arise? It is in the idea of professionalism.

Men who have stood for pure athletics and clean athletics realize that a line must be drawn somewhere to keep matters in check. But the summer baseball proposition is one which must be dealt with carefully.

If a university student is enabled to play baseball in the summer in order to earn money to go to school, it looks to the students that he should be allowed to do so.

But here the trouble arises. If summer baseball is allowed, and college athletes are permitted to do this, then the cry will arise, "Let them do anything in athletic lines to earn money to go to school, and still be amateurs."

What will the result be?

THE FIRST GAME.

Cotner comes Saturday for the first basket-ball game of the 1911 season.

Convocation

The Honor System

Thursday, 11 a. m.

What will the result be? How ill the season end?

These are all questions which only time can answer, but the men who are working to make the season a success believe that this will be the result.

The work of the squad has, so far, been all practice. This first game will determine the strong and weak points of the Cornhuskers and Coach Field and Captain Hutchinson will then have the duty of providing the remedy for the weaknesses.

All the students hope and believe that this is Nebraska's year and that the victories of football and debate will be continued in basket-ball.
