JANUARY 14, 1911.

The interclass debates are to be held soon. With the inauguration of this custom in the university the opportunity was made for men of the university to participate in debating work when they would not otherwise do so. The ability of different individuals is not always known by the men themselves, and while they are interested in forensic work, they who do not believe that they are capable of winning a place on the university squad feel that the competition will are only for the best. Movements of this sort is what makes the university grow. It is the impetus for development, for it provides a means for better acquaintanceship among the men and women of the institution, and social acquaintance counts for a great deal in the development of an institution like the university. The cause is a worthy one, and the support of the older minds in matters which tend to make the institution expand, should be aided in every possible manner by the entire university body—both faculty and student.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB PLAY.

Nearly every student of the university is interested in theatrical productions, and nearly every student is interested in athletic teams of the school. Early last fall the big play of the Dramatic club was given a free date, and about a week ago a basketball game was scheduled for the same date. While the basketball game will perhaps be a good one, the members of the Dramatic club do not present plays for the student body every week. The opportunities of seeing the university team in action will be numerous for the next few months, but the chances of seeing the Dramatic club not be so keen on the class teams and thus take up the work which later gives them more confidence and prepares them for membership on the university teams.

FINAL EXAMINATIONS.

The approach of the week when final examinations will be held behooves every undergraduate of the university to work, and work hard. This is the period when men and women may make a success or a failure of their college career. In past years the exodus of a large number of students from the university at the close of the final examination period is not only detrimental to the school in a way, but to those students as well. They may be allowed to return the following fall, but they have lost a year, and a year which is lost means the chance has gone by to get through school that much earlier, to say nothing of the valuable time which is wasted. The effort of every student should be centered in making passing marks, not alone for their own benefit, but for the best interests of the university as a whole.

THE GRADUATE CLUB.

The attempts of interested parties to keep the Graduate club in existence should be met with support on every hand. A move of this sort is only for the best interests of the school. When men and women of mature judgment organize, as in this case, the efforts more than once again is almost nil. Since the club has been given this date for the presentation of their play, it is only fair that the students give it their support the same as they did the Cornhusker banquet. It is a fair proposition, and while it is "on the other side of the fence," so to speak, nevertheless it is only just that the club be given support in this play. They have worked hard and their efforts deserve credit.

RECEPTION TO GRADUATES.

Dean and Mrs. Sherman Entertain at Their J Street Home.

A reception to students in the graduate college was held Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Dean Sherman and Mrs. Sherman, 1234 J street. During the present year the work of the Graduate club has been neglected and plans were proposed and discussed at this reception for the reorganization of the society. A large number of the students of the graduate college were in attendance.

Notice.

All track men winning their letters in 1910 are requested to have their pictures taken in track clothes at St. George's studio between now and Sunday. These pictures are for the Cornhusker and there will be no charges.
