JANUARY 20, 1911.

Nebraska for Nebraska men. That is the sentiment which was easily apparent in the dedicatory ceremonies which were held Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The donation of three thousand dollars for the benefit of worthy men in the University of Nebraska was an unexpected benevolence. That the pleasure and appreciation of the student body of the university cannot be measured ured over an act of this kind, is to put the matter lightly. Not alone do the thanks of the faculty suffice, but the students of the university also wish to thank Mr. Webster, Regent Whitmore and Dr. Waddell on their own behalf.

That the work of the students who are earning their way through the university is appreciated is shown by the three separate donations of $1,000 each to the fund which will be used for the aiding of men of this institution whose efforts to gain an education and a livelihood at the same time were unsuccessful. The requirements under which the fund will be used have not as yet been given out, but it is known that the attempts of these men to aid the students themselves is a thing which is appreciated by the undergraduate body, and each one gives thanks to the men who have so remembered that the university student is one who often attempts to make his way in the world without the assistance of others.

The Daily Nebraskan is but a four-column four-page sheet. In that paper must go a certain amount of advertising, in order that the paper may have some financial income besides the subscription list. However in a day many events of interest to the student body as a whole occur, and these affairs may be all of equal importance. The most important news is published in the "slug-head" stories, and the minor facts in the smaller items. That these are not always printed is no fault of the editorial staff. All the news all the time has been the aim of the staff of the Daily Nebraskan, and efforts have been made to follow this law. However many times more "dope" is set up than will fill the space on the sheet. This results in many items being left out. The stories which fit best according to the idea of the compositor are the ones which are used. This rule is followed regardless of the importance of the news. As a result many news items are left out. The blame lies on the small sheet. No one else.

ENDORSE PEARSE.

Junior "Medics" Meet and Decide on a Candidate.

A recent meeting of the junior medical class was called by President King for the discussion of the political situation. A vote was taken on the three candidates. On the third ballot H. B. Pearse was unanimously chosen as the candidate the junior "medics" would support. There are about twenty-five members of the class.

Regent Coupland was a campus visitor yesterday.
