

UNIVERSITY NIGHT PROGRAM

concerning what students had to see certain professors about. Mr. Green also did some fancy dancing.

Dean Richards gave an exciting poem on "Texas on the Rio Grande," full of harrowing adventures, all of which were faithfully and elaborately carried out with gestures. Miss Ensign gave a "Dance Aesthetique," that was very amusing.

Delinquency Committee.

Four students have been summoned before the committee. John Slow was the first one whose case was taken up. Professor Maxey was asked by Mr. Engberg to speak for, by, with and against the student. Dr. Maxey said this reminded him of a proverb. The faculty all laughed at his joke about five minutes later. His talk was mostly about girls. Mr. Slow was then given a chance to say something in his own defense. After spending quite a while in saying nothing, he was told his only chance was to sing.

O. U. Kid was the next student who was summoned. His tale was also unsatisfactory and he was commanded to sing. His song, "I Got the Time," made a great hit. Hugo Hercules, the third student, a wonderful athlete, had Professor Fogg appointed to show why he should be put out of school. The professor delivered a stirring oration on Phi Beta Kappa and said the young man was not trying for that honor so should be dismissed. "Doc" Condra immediately arose with an emphatic defense. He said no sissies or mollycoddles were wanted in this university. Look at this splendid specimen of manhood. He was in favor of keeping him in school by all means. Mr. Hercules invited the faculty to stop and think—for once—of what would happen to athletics in case he left school. But in spite of his plea he was compelled to sing.

"I'm It" had Professor Frye appointed to speak on his case. The professor had no very clear idea on the subject. The victim had so sing or do something, so he sang.

Dales Arrives.

Professor Dales arrives after all is over. When the decision is to be arrived at he arises and says that in view of the facts which all have just heard he thinks the boys should have another chance, and so it is agreed.

Professor Engberg said they immediately changed from culprits and rowdies into gentlemen and students. The whole company joined in singing a Nebraska song. A number of the imitations in this act were exceedingly clever and apt. B. C. Marcellus had an almost perfect representation of Professor Fogg in look and speech. Mr. Krause made an exceptional likeness of Professor Frye. E. W. Welch as John Uhl was also very good. The voices blended in fine style and all the songs were much enjoyed.

The entire entertainment was a splendid success. There is no doubt but that University Night will become a permanent fixture of the school year. A high standard has been set for next year for the program left no doubt of the genius of the university
