

Directory of Advertisers

The following merchants and business men of Lincoln are anxious to serve the University students. By placing their advertisements in the columns of the Daily Nebraskan they show that they want your trade. And you may be sure that the merchant who is willing to make a little effort to get your patronage is the one who is going to treat you honestly and considerately in attempting to keep it. So you—as well as the Nebraskan—will profit by trading with these people:

ROSTAND'S "CHANTECLER" ALLEGORY OF HUMAN LIFE

hen's tea and there have him killed by a game cock, imported from a neighboring farm. Chantecler appears and calls the day. Then follows the beautiful scene of the approaching dawn. Chantecler then reveals his secret to the beautiful pheasant hen, who is overcome with the grandness of it and falls in love with him.

The Crisis.

The crisis of the play comes in the third act, which is the guinea hen's tea. It comes in the early morning. The game cock comes from the nearby farm. Chantecler's hens all desert him and go over to the newcomer, whose brilliant plumage attracts them. Chantecler then fights the game cock and defeats him. The hens then return to him, but he is angry. He has seen more of the ways of the world and he desires to escape the falsities and complications. So he leaves the hens and goes into the forest with the pheasant.

The Night of the Nightingale.

The last act is called "The Night of the Nightingale." It is a month later. Chantecler has found that the dawn rises without him, and that his song is not essential. He is, however, strong and self-reliant, and his life is on a higher plane than before. He has more experience and a sense of duty to mankind. He leaves the pheasant hen to return to his duties on the farm. While he does not call the day he can announce it to a sleeping world. As he leaves the forest he is spied by a hunter. The pheasant hen sees his danger and tries to draw it on herself. She is caught in a snare and will be captured, but Chantecler goes free.

The characters all have a great deal of the human about them and the lesson to be gained from the play is easily seen. Dr. Pound showed a keen perception of her subject and her talk was much enjoyed.

NO IVY DAY MAY 20

LAWS REFUSE TO GIVE UP DATE SET FOR THE ANNUAL BARBECUE.

The laws have flatly turned down the request of the Ivy day committee for the giving over of May 20, the date set for the barbecue, as the time for the Ivy day festivities. The laws had already selected their date and made arrangements for securing Capital Beach as a place to hold their reunion. Plans for speakers had been made and several prominent men asked to be present at that day. For this reason the solons were unwilling to give in.

The committees are working hard and the commissary department is unusually busy. Those in charge of the program have been doing some hustling and feel confident of having some of the most prominent lawyers in the country present. Dean Hastings has written a letter to Solicitor General Lehman of St. Louis, who has been president of the American Bar association, asking him to make the principal address of the day.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL.

Nebraska to Have Another Agricultural School.

The state is to have a new agricultural school. Governor Aldrich yesterday signed the bill providing for a school to be located in the southwest part of the state, probably at Holdrege. The amount appropriated is $100,000, and the board of public lands and buildings will act on the matter next July.
