discovered the work of the freshmen, who overnight had painted the fence around the ground for the new architecture building with the following flaming words: "1914 Owns This Fence. Rah! Rah! 1914." The second year men fired by the startling advertisement of 1914, which seemed an offense to their dignity, immediately scurried the campus in search of freshmen and made them eradicate the objectionable 1914 from the fence with their caps and pieces of sandpaper. Before the erasure was finally completed more freshmen appeared on the scene and with the aid of the juniors put the wily sophomores to flight.
