APRIL 21, 1911.

Saturday afternoon try-outs for the university track team will be held on the athletic field. No admission is to be charged; the competition will be strong; track contests are interesting; the meet takes place Saturday; and the weather ought to be good. Now what is there to hinder a good crowd being present to witness the events? If you have never seen a field meet or anything of that sort and are not sure whether you should like one, here is your opportunity to learn without spending any money.

DAY FOR SLAUGHTER OF DANDELIONS IS SET

APRIL 29 SUGGESTED AS FATAL FOR YELLOW FLOWERS.

PLAN FAVORED BY THE STUDENTS

Regents and Faculty Members Are Also Anxious for a More Beautiful Campus.

Saturday morning, April 29, has been suggested as the day on which the dandelions are to suffer. The yellow flower is beginning to predominate and it will not be long before the campus presents far from the desired green effect. In some places the grass has been crowded out entirely and the small force that has been mustered so far is unable to cope with the situation.

It is suggested that a dandelion day be inaugurated and the students get out to slay the mischievous weed. This has met with favor from the board of regents and the faculty. All members of the student body approached so far have sniffed a willingness to lend support in the way of a few hours of hard labor to make the campus more beautiful, and it is probable that on the morning above mentioned the dandelion is to meet its fate. The authorities are of the opinion that after such a raid by the students the force employed on the grounds would be able to keep the weeds down.

It is probable that there will be something more to the event than the mere digging of dandelions. After the yellow flowers have ceased to flourish there will likely be a program consisting of music by the band and several patriotic addresses. It is to be a regular holiday for the university and every attempt will be made to make it mean something to the students as well as the dandelions.

fresh air, and you sure need it after so much hard study. Take a few minutes off and see what the university track team is going to do to its rivals. Encourage those boys who train for many days. Get out and yell for them. The benefit will be general. It will increase your prospective of life as well as your lung capacity. Do not think that because there is no charge that the meet is not going to be a good one.

Remember Saturday, April 29. It is to be the yellow flower day at the university. If you had planned on picking flowers that morning your plans will not be upset. The dandelion is not so popular as the violet, perhaps, but it looks worse on the plant. You already have a date for that day. Your loyalty to the university demands that you dig dandelions. The girls say they are going to help. Now, boys, is your chance to show them how chivalrous and mighty you are by conquering the campus pest.

All candidates for the Dramatic club should register before Saturday noon, April 22. Registrations may be made at Miss Howell's office in U106 or by notifying Florence Hostetler, secretary of the club.

Sigma Chi will give its formal party at the Lincoln hotel tonight.

The department of sociology recently purchased seventy-five slides of the National Child Labor Commission. These slides show the conditions resulting from child labor, and are a means of educating the public, and creating a sentiment which it is hoped in time will do away with this great curse.
