THEY ARE GOING.

Woe to the dandelions! Before the sun goes down tonight the last yellow flower will have ceased to bloom on the University of Nebraska campus. No longer will the irresistible and greedy roots rob the grasses of their nourishment. This will be one of the grandest days in the history of the institution. It is something unique which will long be remembered. If a success, this day will always be a monument to the enterprise and industry of our student body. It means more than the eradication of dandelions. It is an outgrowth of the greater Nebraska spirit of which we are so proud. This is the first step taken by the students to beautify the campus. It is a chance to show the real Nebraska spirit and will register its warmth in the hearts of Nebraska men and women. This afternoon we shall know how loyal the students are. There will be no need of farther inquiry to ascertain whether a few only are true Nebraskans. The man or woman willing to work for the university is all right. The thing that will stand around is a useless ornament without a place in all the universe of creation. And the sooner it resolves itself into the elements, the sooner will its component parts become a benefit to mankind, though it may be to enrich the soil only. Let us hope and prove that there are none of these ornaments in the University of Nebraska.

THINK OF MONEY ONCE.

The great spring holiday for the university comes next Wednesday. Considerable expense will be incurred and it is necessary to have money to meet these expenses. It is a great day and the entertainment will be unparalleled. But medals and lunches can not be had without money. The committee is going to furnish the entertainment and the university public should provide the funds.

Every man and woman in the university, without any exceptions whatsoever, should buy a ticket before Saturday night. It will be a great help to the committee, and no one will have to bother about it when he reaches the farm. There is no use in putting off in the hope that there will be a bargain for tickets will not go at a reduced rate. There is going to be no reductions of any sort and it will cost as much to get in to see the last stunt as it will for the whole afternoon's program. Do not be trifling and procrastinating. Learn to be accommodating by buying a ticket right away.

THE DANDELION.

(Contributed.)

No, they are not "dandy,"
These pesky campus weeds,
For every little yellow head
Produces scores of seeds.

There's not a thing that's "dandy"
About these nasty plants,
For when you sit down on them,
They spoil your nice white pants.

Or if you wear the other clothes,
They stain your summer dresses.
When you sit down with your young man,
Gee! how such a thing distresses!

Go for the dandelions,
Dig, dig, dig;
And so pile up credits,
Big, big, big.

SOPHOMORE HOP TONIGHT.

Comes as a Climax to Dandelion Day Celebrations.

As a climax to the Dandelion day celebrations, the sophomore hop will be held at the Lincoln hotel tonight. The sale of tickets was much heavier yesterday and a good crowd is assured. However, the number is limited so that there is no danger of the hall being overcrowded. No tickets will be sold at the door.

NOTICE TO FRESHMEN.

All freshmen are requested to appear on the campus today at 1:30 p. m. As you all know, Dandelion day is to be tried for the first time in the University of Nebraska. This is a movement which should meet the approval and encouragement of all. As shown in another part of this paper, each class will have its portion of the campus to weed. Why not have the freshmen's quarter the best on the campus? Though there may be no prizes awarded, yet it would be a source of pleasure to know that we excelled. No class has a right to be more interested in the campus, for no class has longer to remain on it. Therefore let us turn out in full numbers and show our Nebraska spirit by doing our share in the beautifying of our grounds. Remember the slogan of the Olympics. "No sluffers: all workers."

EARL W. BRANNON,
President.

Booker T. Washington, in addressing the students at Wisconsin, said that he considered the manual laborer as well educated as the college graduate. He said he sees no difference between the head and the hands.
