Fortunate indeed are those who can attend the Pan-Hellenic banquet this evening. Every Greek in the university should be present. This is one of the big banquets of the school

NO CORNHUSKERS AT PLAY.

Management Announces that Books Will Be Out Before that Time.

It was emphatically announced by the management of the Cornhusker yesterday that the book would not be distributed at the senior class play as originally planned for several reasons. It would be unfair to those who could not be present, would cause a commotion at the play and detract therefrom, a satisfactory distribution could not be had, and it is an impossibility for the reason that the book will be ready for the subscribers before the play will be presented.

The effects of Dandelion day are becoming apparent. Several of the fraternities set their freshmen at work Saturday, and in consequence the lawns now present an appearance suitable to the splendor of the houses. Cotner university is having a dandelion day today, and several of the other institutions are expected to follow suit.

Tomorrow is Ivy day. It is the great all-university holiday and there is no Nebraskan who can afford to miss it. It is one of those few events which really promote college spirit. Besides the fellowship, there is the entertainment, the equal of which is never provided for the money. It has been called a senior day, but it is rather a day for the whole university.

The loyalty of the students was shown on Dandelion day. It is now up to you to make Ivy day an equal success. Money is needed. Buy your tickets today, if you have not obtained them already. Get on and see the track meet, the baseball game, the Dramatic club play, hear the band concert, have your lunch at the farm, come to the morning exercises on the campus—the cost is less than reasonable.

The Komensky club will present a short play at its next meeting, which will take place on Friday evening.

Some special stunts are being planned for the Pan-Hellenic banquet which is to be held at the Lincoln this evening.
