Freshman Hop Falls to Attract Dancers and Creates Large Deficit.

The freshman hop was not a success. In spite of the fact that all present had a good time, the last class hop of the year was a financial failure and the debt incurred thereby promises to be a burden upon the first year class. The fact that the class was to give a dance on May 6 became known so late that it was not possible for men to secure partners for the occasion. And the result is that it failed to pay out, leaving a shortage of about $20 in the treasury of the dance committee.

Chairman David Meeker and the members of his committee did their best to sell tickets, but there was no demand. Coming as it did just between the very successful sophomore hop and the coming grand military ball, the dancers were not attracted by the freshman function. About seventy couples only were present, but they had plenty of room and all reported that the committee had provided a good party, even though it was not well patronized. Kenneth Wherry was master of the ceremonies.

Notice.

Students who have taken the mechanical engineering course in wood turning and who would be willing to miss a year in school, may secure positions as manual training teachers in grades and high schools. See A. A. Reed for further information.
