entire course of activity approximate to a great University begins to flow in those channels which it will follow through the year.

The time has arrived, when, having successfully become Nebraskans, we should determine what sort of Nebraskans we are to be. Upon this depends success or failure during four years under the scarlet and cream.

In a University of such proportions, there are organizations and activities innumerable, demanding our attention and efforts; some perhaps only as social bodies, but the majority having in view some definite object looking toward the betterment and development of Nebraska as a unit.
