THE WATER SITUATION.
 There are rumors that the student body has a suggestion to make to the "powers that be," but that they do not know just how to go about it.
 Although Dr. Waite, the University's expert bacteriologist, issues his daily advises about the necessity of drinking boiled water, no one has thought of placing a tank of the germless liquid within the campus limits to relieve the parched throats of well-meaning students.
 As the "colon bacilli" pick them off one by one, the students express their growing willingness to drink anything the powers ordain, but so far they have been unable to locate any water about the campus that "swarmeth not with the unclean hordes."
 It has been suggested that, if the boiled article is impossible, the chemistry department furnish distilled water to tide us over the crisis.
 A number of students have received letters from home commanding them to carry with them boiled water in bottles. But there is general uneasiness as to the impression which such a custom might create upon outsiders.

FARM BRIEFS.
 The State Farm Chorus made its first appearance today when it sang for the Nebraska Corn Improvers' Association.
 Another big athletic rally was held at the Farm last Saturday to arouse enthusiasm for the basketball season. Professors Lee and Westgate were the principal speakers. The gentlemen especially urged everyone to get out for the athletic tournament scheduled for February. One immediate result of their effort was the addition of 180 members to the Athletic
