

intervals becomes a roaring torrent; it presents a rainbow of colors, it is bordered by clusters of conversation-alists and eternally breathes of memories. Thus it is that these nine white steps with their red-stone ledges are not the sordid things which they appear, but are in reality the cradle of gossip, the home of dates, the bed for a constant stream of social activities.

Mr. D. W. Eicher, father of Miss Winnifred Eicher, of the staff of the Daily Nebraskan, died at his home in Burbank, California, Wednesday. We wish to extend our sympathy to our fellow student in her bereavement.
