LAMENTATION!!!

Geology men at Nebraska, I'm told Put forth a lament that's a peach of a scold.
 A regular nerve-racking, ripsnorting
 spasm,
 And in it they peeve till you'd think
 that they had them,
 Just because to the office a friend
 comes each day

Now
 Here's a REAL grouch!
 We've a friend who almost makes this office his home,

He's got on my nerves till I mentally
 chafe;
 On second, or third, or fourth floors
 I'm not safe.
 I've hinted a plenty, for he's getting
 so gay,
 But he won't be insulted or driven away.

He roars and he snorts if he can't find the maps,
 If he can't place a field book he growls
 and he snaps,
 When I say just a moment, I'll find
 them for you,
 Every helper I've got begins to fidget
 and stew;
 Fandemonium reigns where we should
 live in peace,

1415 O BUDD Upstairs

Puts his feet on the desk as he uses
 the phone;
 Pleads for his girl to go for a walk;
 Tells ME to Shut up—he can't hear if I talk.
 When I need the "stenog" he will call
 her away.
 To bang out some nonsense for him
 half a day.
 If he has half a chance—I've never known him to fall
 To open and read and paw over my mail.
 If my field book is out, this inquisitive
 crank
 Is copying everything, isn't it rank?
 My maps—though I carefully hide
 them away,
 He'll find—and grab out a big handful each day.

He uses my envelopes, paper and
 stamps,
 He's the nerviest, cussedest, meanest
 of scamps.

And a brain storm is brewing if such antics don't cease.

And one of these days, if his manners
 don't mend,
 I'm going to forget he was ever my friend.

With demoniac glee and a big monkey
 wrench
 I'll knock his block off—and my office
 I'll drench
 With his gall and his gore—and in it he'll lay
 Till the ash man will drive up and haul him away.
