

CORNHUSKERS WIN IN NINTH INNING FINISH

but Haskell beat the throw. Underwood at the bat signaled for a hit and run, but Haskell misjudged the pitcher and was caught coming in home, making two out. Hyde and Oliver in the meantime advanced a base. Underwood then rapped one on the nose, bringing in Hyde and scoring the winning run.

Notes of the Game.

That catch of Flory's was regular league stuff.

Several overzealous battalion captains tried extra hard to exhibit their companies to the eager crowd, and incidentally to break up the game.

Hyde made a record by scoring a run when he was not recorded at bat. In his only time up he got a walk.

Things began to look bad in the ninth, but the mascot, Dr. Maxey, foreordained a victory and the boys pulled through.

Six co-eds braved the elements to witness the contest.

A rumor was spread that a grandstand spectator was frozen to death, but later reports denied the fact.

"Umps" Casper Clarke, when not trying to keep warm, endeavored to officiate. Once in a while the steam from his breath made him give several dubious decisions, but they were excusable.

Tarkio's battery was the whole team.

Towle hit one to Tarkio's "Little Lord Fontleroy" in right field, but he got lost in "Dog" Eager's lumber pile and Towle landed on second.

Coach Stiehm was rather excited over the first game, and between keeping track of foul balls over the fence and warming up pitchers, was a busy man.
