Chick Sale, a clever comedy protean extertainer, is offering a decidedly original and novel conception in "A Country School Entertainment." He has struck upon an idea that has made him a great favorite with theatergoers generally. Mr. Sale reveals in his work an amount of versatility that is remarkable. In the twinkling of an eye and without the aid of facial make-up, he presents youth, then old age, sinking his own personality so deeply that one marvels at the genius of the youthful actor. Mr. Sale has made an emphatic hit in all the principal cities of the country. He was discovered by the Orpheum circuit, scored heavily in all the theaters of the circuit, and won the highest praise during his appearance in and about New York. His second appearance is showing him to be a greater favorite than ever.—Adv.
