

GIRLS' CLUB TO GAME

AFTER BANQUET SATURDAY NOON
WILL HOLD RALLY.

PART OF GRANDSTAND RESERVED

Admission to This Section May Be Secured at Gate Saturday Before
Game—Large Number Going from Club.

The annual banquet of the University Girls' Club will be held Saturday at 12:30 in the Temple, immediately preceding the Kansas game. This will be the second banquet held by this organization under these circumstances, and practically the same plan will be followed as was used last year. There will be no formal program during or after the banquet, but college songs will be sung, especially the new ones pertaining to the K. U. game, and when the girls' spirits have been raised to the proper pitch they will go in a body and join the throng bound for the game.

Tickets on Sale at Gate.

The sale of tickets for the banquet closed yesterday in order to give those in charge time for preparation, and a large number of girls signed up for the banquet. A section, known as the girls' section, has been reserved for them for the Saturday game, and they will have their own cheer and yell leaders. Girls who do not go to the banquet and who will not be with the girls in the club can get tickets for this girls' section at the gate Saturday, however.

Christmas Party Next.

This club luncheon is the third event given by the organization this year, being preceded by the opening party at the Temple, September 28, and the Farm breakfast October 12. Various other meetings will be given during the year, the next being the girls' Christmas party, to be held December 14. —T. K. F.

FLACK STOPS OVER.

Former Nebraska Student Spends a Couple of Hours With Friends.

George E. Flack, ex-'12, stopped over in Lincoln yesterday en route to Omaha and visited with friends on the campus. Flack was a student at Nebraska for two years and took one year at Harvard. He now holds a position with the Omaha Occidental Loan and Trust Company.

JOHN UHL TURNS STOCKMAN

Resigns from Position of Caretaker of Armory, After Twenty Years' Service, to Get Back to Nature.

John Uhl, for twenty years an employe of the University, did his last day's work as caretaker of the Armory Wednesday. A farm of thirty acres out by College View was the influence which made Uhl resign his position. For several years he has been living on this place, and accumulating a small herd of Jersey cows for dairy purposes. The deep snows of last winter made it very inconvenient for him to retain his position at the University, as well as maintain the herd, so he decided to put all his energies into the dairy.

John, as he was familiarly known to every cadet of the past two decades, has been almost a tradition of the University. When the embryo colonels appeared in the Armory for the first time it was always John who saw them first and sold them uniforms. He always kept a good stock of the different parts of the uniforms and was willing to lend these without security if the buyer was temporarily bent.

Frank Wolfe, formerly night watchman, takes the position left vacant, but as the uniform business has been abolished by the military department it is improbable that he will become as well known to the student body as was John Uhl. —Su.
