TAG DAY.

Today The Daily Nebraskan makes an organized effort to be read by every student whose college patriotism and whose appreciation of the "Rag's" service makes them willing to pay for it. Every group, every club, every class, every fraternity, is being systematically canvassed for subscriptions. Knowing that the majority of the students, all of whom want to be accurately posted on everything that goes on, are not included within these organizations, we offer to the student public four reasons why everybody should subscribe:

First—The Daily Nebraskan is a definite part of the University equipment which is designed for the students' benefit and which every loyal Nebraskan should support.

Second—Our advertisers are those who are making a special effort to get and hold your trade. If you want to find a business man who will sell you student quality at student prices, subscribe for the "Rag" and look him up.

Third—The Daily Nebraskan is the only medium through which anybody can tell everybody what he thinks. We refuse to publish no man's views. All we ask in return is your subscription.

Fourth—The Daily Nebraskan is the official bulletin of the University. Your bulletin boards at best are only a reminder of what you already know. The new facts about your course, your class and your professor you will find in The Daily Nebraskan. The prime function of this sheet is to let you know the facts, the truth about everything that pertains to your scholastic interests. Help us to do this work by subscribing.

In general—our news section is bright and newsy. We take suggestions on how to improve it. Talent, not "pull" selects our reporters. Editorially, we are going to keep right on giving you a complete change of program a new show every day.

We aim to part with all our knowledge, meagre though that supply necessarily is, on all matters that require critical or commendatory exploitation. In short, we want to serve you, serve you, that's all.

Coupled with the distinct advantages enumerated above, our low subscription price—only a dollar a semester—is a drawing card in itself, and it becomes quite lost in the average student's financial stock of $30 per. Better subscribe.

MACBETH MAY BE ADDED

Department of English Literature Considers New Courses in Extension Work.

Work is now being done in the department of English Literature to add new courses in connection with the University Extension Department. At present courses I, II, VIII and the equivalents of VI and VII are offered.

The new course now under discussion will probably be Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Those in charge of this department are well satisfied with the results as the students taking up these courses are truly in earnest, desirous of improvement and advancement, and in several cases have become so interested that they later came to the University to enter regular courses. This fact in itself speaks well for the Extension Department.

Being a magician sometimes has its disadvantages, especially when one is adept in the art of dealing winning poker hands. J. Warren Keane, who is at the Orpheum this week, had a rather unpleasant few moments in New York recently at one of the weekly smokers of the Green Room club. He was called upon to entertain the gathering and gave his famous card trick of dealing five exceptionally good poker hands in one deal after the cards were shuffled and cut by some one in the audience. After the entertainment Keane was invited to sit in a friendly game. Before the deal came around to Keane, two of the members suddenly remembered business engagements and the other two didn't think poker was a good three-handed game.

Mr. Keane claims that sleight-of-hand performers fool the brain instead of the eye. By combining his tricks with a line of amusing talk he gives his audience two things to think about.

"Your brain is going two different ways at once and not allowed to concentrate," he says. "Consequently it is not necessary to be quick of hand to deceive. You are like the absent-minded man who is thinking several things at once, and not definitely on any one. But if people had two sets of eyes and brains, one set to see with and one to think, the magician never would be able to make a living."
