

GERMAN DRAMATIC TRYOUTS

Eleven Dramatists Elected To Club Membership Following Tryouts Wednesday Night.

At the German Dramatic Club tryouts held Wednesday evening the following people were elected to the club: Lucille and Camille Leyda, Frank Carlson, Helen Springer, Edith Neal, Winnie Outhouse, Gertrude Scribner, Mary Rokahr, Madeline Horton, Frances Tutill, Vivian Cleaver.

From the tryouts which were held about two weeks previously, the following six were admitted to the club: Johanna Ogden, Helen Jess, Agnes Samuelson, Minnie Schultz, Ottomar Strieler, Maude Clark.

Plans are now being made for the play to be given next year. "Die Journalisten," given this year, was a marked success, both dramatically and financially, and the club, which has been organized only three years, feels encouraged to even greater efforts.

HA! HA! DISCOVERED

Breathes there a man with soul so dead

Who never to himself hath said
"Tomorrow morning will I arise
Before the sun lights up the skies
I'll set this clock so it will ring
Before the birds begin to sing,
It's strident tone will me awake—
An early 8 o'clock I'll make."

But when at an unearthly hour
Next morn the clock with all its power

Makes noise enough to stir the dead
And wakes the man upon the bed—
Breathes there a man, I now repeat,
Who would not chuck it in the street,
Back into the bed to leap
And with a sigh go off to sleep?

Kenneth's gone a-fishing,
Buster's gone away,
C. L. Rein has disappeared,
Won't be seen today.

Cutright's out a-fussing,
Yochum where is he?*

Lawsy, we're deserted,
But we like to be.

University Girls Interested In Russian Work at Neighborhood House

Very few of us, as students in the University realize that right here, in our own midst, we have a "little Russia," whose inhabitants hold a strong claim upon us, as the means of their becoming nationalized and at the same time, becoming intelligent citizens of the state. Germans by birth, the people that make up the population of this small section in Lincoln have migrated from Germany to the Volga river in Russia and eventually to America.

They are a sturdy, capable group of people, but seemingly helpless, with no conception of the American ideals or ways of doing things.

With the end in view—that of giving them American standards, works at the North Side Neighborhood house at Ninth and New Hampshire streets, is being carried on. Here classes are held for boys and girls of all ages. The girls are taught the domestic arts and organized play, and occasionally the older girls are allowed to display any dramatic ability they may possess, in the production of simple plays, under the guidance of some talented person. The boys are allowed to expend a little of their surplus energy otherwise expended in harmful ways, in wrestling matches, and other athletic forms of amusements. They also have a glee club, under the leadership of a university member, occasional expeditions to the state house, museum, state farm, post-office, or some other place of interest, are sources of much pleasure to the children, and at the same time are of considerable educational value to them. Nor is the social life of these children neglected. Scarcely a holiday goes by, that it isn't celebrated by them, in some fitting manner. These "parties" are always great successes and are very much appreciated by the children.

The obstacles to be overcome in this work, however, are great, for the minute the child returns to his own home from the Neighborhood House, he is, literally speaking, back in Russia again where the mothers and fathers not so appreciative as their children, are inclined to scoff at the American methods so unlike their own, and to discourage their use in the home.

But it is to be anticipated that when these children grow up, and have homes of their own, that they will indorse and bring into practice the modern American methods and principles that have been taught them at the Neighborhood House, and that in so doing they will become strong, broad-minded men and women, worthy of citizenship in the United States.
