Woman's Suffrage.

Mrs. Pankhurst has recently called attention of the whole world to woman's suffrage. Suffragettes point to her proudly and say, "What a martyr." But millions of women in their quiet homes murmur, "How pitiful." And are they not right? Isn't it a pitiful sight to see a woman so lose her dignity as to quarrel with jailkeepers? Is there anything inspiring in seeing women give their times and strength to smashing windows and walking the streets in the interests of suffrage when an ignorant nurse maid cares for their children at home?

Do you consider yourself an idiot or a criminal simply because you haven't the ballot? No—nor does anyone else except those who have to seek an argument. Women's organizations have been behind child labor laws, health laws and improvement laws; in fact they have given the impetus to many of the best movements in the country. When they can accomplish these things merely by their influence, why do they lose all their dignity by militantly seeking the ballot? How can a woman care to sit in the jury of a murder trial? Or how could she care to go to a voting booth and mingle with the common loafers who so infest such places

Suffrage has not materially affected the states which already have it. Authorities say that the majority of women take no interest in it. Does it not seem that this great commotion is merely wanting what we have not? If suffrage will send the women back to their homes, and deliver the suffering public from any more of these disgusting exhibitions, let us hope that suffrage will come tomorrow.
