ACADEMY OF SCIENCE

TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION
CLOSES WITH FIELD TRIP
ON SATURDAY.

J. C. JENSEN NEW PRESIDENT

Enrollment Numbers One Hundred
Twenty-Four—Scientific Papers to Be Published.

The Nebraska Academy of Sciences held its twenty-third annual session at the Temple on May 16 and 17, with a good attendance both local and outside members. The first day was started with a short business session during which a constitution revised to meet present needs was adopted.

This session was followed by a general program which occupied about three hours, by section programs covering several hours in the afternoon, and by an evening banquet with about forty members in attendance. An address was given by President Elmore of Grand Island, and toasts were responded to by Dr. Condra, Professor Hoffman and Dr. Bessey.

Saturday was devoted to a field trip. Heavy rain during the night and threatening weather in the early morning hours reduced the size of the party, but twenty-five members left Lincoln at 8:25 for Crete. Here the party visited the new laboratories of Doane college, after which, joined by a number of people from Crete, the navigation of the Blue was undertaken.

For a single boat this would have been impossible, but with two of them to loan a ripple now and then to each other it was quite feasible. When one boat was aground the other would nose up alongside and swash it off the sandbar, and the favor would soon be returned. This is a detail in the art of navigation which is neglected in commonplace deep water like the Atlantic ocean and Lake Manawa, and we should be proud of our home technique. In about two hours the six mile trip had passed into history, and the party reached the power dam which they sought. Everyone knew the stream to be damned, but most of the party had supposed that the epithet related to its whole length, so the localization was gratifying. Some of the party returned by boat, others took automobiles, and still others walked to Milford. The latest bulletins indicate that almost everyone has already found his way home.

But in spite of or perhaps in a measure on account of the difficulties encountered afloat and ashore, the trip was a success.

The Academy has an enrollment of 124, and is now in possession of means to resume regular publication of its proceedings. Many papers of real value are presented at each session, covering a wide range of subjects, some being of general scientific in-

Senior Relief Dance At Beach Tonight is Last Big Hop of Year

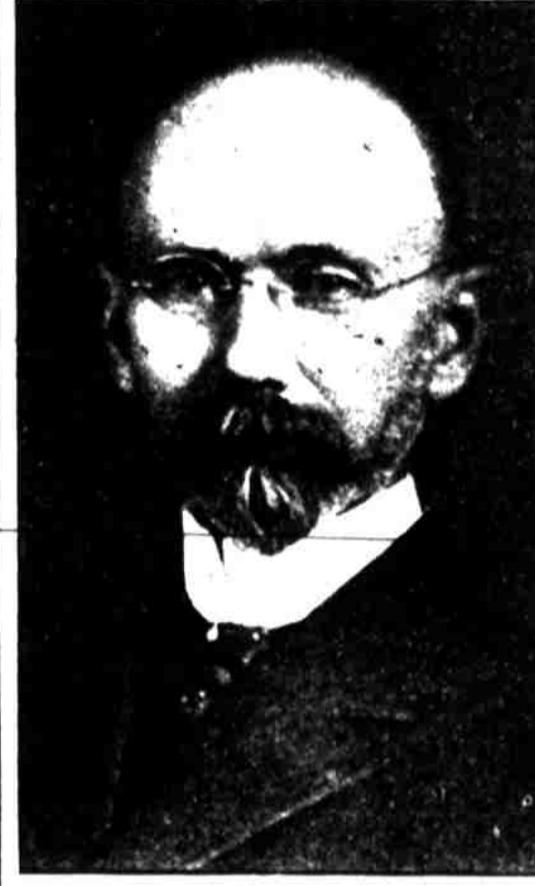

The committees in charge of the Senior Relief dance tonight have matured their plans for the last big hop of the expiring class of 1913, and have this day made public their final announcements concerning the distinctive and fascinating event.

The dance will be at Capital Beach. The only means of transportation to the Beach is the one street car line. Dancers will find it possible to catch a car for the Beach each hour and half hour: 7, 7:30, 8 and 8:30. The last car to be taken in order not to miss the grand march is the car that leaves the corner of Tenth and O streets at 8 o'clock. The dance begins promptly at 8:30 and continues without bate of breath until 11:30, stoppage at the half hour being necessary in order to catch the last car from the Beach to the city. Convenience requires that these announcements be duly observed.

Cast all worries aside. Bring only your cigars and cigarettes. All other refreshments, including punch, ice-cream, cookies, candies and others will be furnished to dancers with the price of admission.

Ample check stands, having no charges to demand for their service will take your wraps and insure their delivery entire after the hop.

Coupled with the usual advantages of outdoor entertainment will be an extra-smooth floor, specially prepared for a limited number of no more than a hundred couples. Music by Hagensick and no efforts will be spared to make this dance worthy of all who expect to forget this form of entertainment for at least three months to come.

Famous Eye Specialist to Address
University Students at Medic's
Convocation This Morning.

Convocation this morning will be in charge of the medical students, for whom the week has been set apart. They have secured Dr. Harold Gifford of Omaha to deliver the address, and feel that no more suitable speaker could have been selected, either on the ground of ability or interest in University medical affairs.

Dr. Gifford is a graduate of Cornell university, '79, and obtained his medical degree from the University of Michigan in 1882. After post-graduate work in New York, Erlangen, Vienna, and Zurich, he began the practice of surgery of the eye and ear in Omaha in 1886. During this time he was also a lecturer on bacteriology in the Omaha Medical college. Later he became a lecturer on bacteriology in the department of diseases of the eye and ear, and assumed the professorship in this department in the fall of 1898. When the Omaha Medical college became affiliated with the university in 1902, he became associate dean, and held this office until the close of 1911, when he was succeeded by Associate Dean Bridges. He has held important positions in medical societies, has been for a great many years editor of the "Ophthalmic Record," and has contributed numerous articles to text-books, journals and reviews.
