

NEW MEDICAL BUILDING.

In a few more weeks the campus will see nothing further of "the Medics." Next fall they start work in quarters so commodious and so adapted to their needs that memories of the present abode will seem like merely a bad dream.

The new medical schol is situated at Forty-second and Jackson streets in Omaha. It is an imposing structure of pressed brick, three stories and a basement.

In the south wing of the basement are located a women's parlor with locker and dressing rooms, and the cold storage, autopsy, and anatomical tank rooms. In the west wing are the lounging, locker, and shower bath rooms for the men, and the inoculation and disinfection room, storage rooms, shop and the heating plant, which extends into a subbasement also. The animal quarters are located in the corner between the south and west wings.

To the left on the first floor as one enters from the street are the offices and a faculty cloak room. This floor also quarters the bacteriological and pathological departments, including laboratories, lecture rooms, and the pathological museum. The library is also situated in this floor in the west wing.

The second floor is devoted to the pharmacology, chemistry, and physiology departments. In addition to the general laboratories and a large lecture room there are special laboratories for research work in each department. The physiology quarters include a quiet room, an optical room, and a shop.

The departments of anatomy and histology are accommodated on the third floor, the former in the south wing, the latter in the west. Besides the large anatomical laboratory the south wing contains a laboratory for advanced work, a preparation room and museum. The large lecture room is situated in the corner. The west wing has, besides a general laboratory, a room for advanced work, chart, technique, quiz and dark rooms.

Every floor has its share of offices. store rooms, etc. Through the center of the building runs the elevator shaft which looks "mighty good!" to the weary students who have so often toiled to the fourth floor of Mechanical Arts hall.

Dance at Beach To Sparkle With Youth and Beauty

The poetry and rhythm of motionthe glory and the harmonious beauty of music-do we medics appreciate these? We do, more, we affirm, than the members of any other college. Where do you find the best musicians, th clearest voiced singers? In the medical college of course. Where are the best dancers in the school-those with intimate knowledge of the most intricate and beautiful steps? Again in the medical college. And if you will but pause a moment to consider, you will see that it must necessarily be so. Of music we know the science, as of physical motion the elements. Who, more skilled in the mysteries of muscles and joints, of nerves and sensations than the medical students? And so a dance, that most ideal combination of music and motion, we aprectate and love more than anyone else, for we love it, not blindly, but with the love of those who under-

Our dean is giving us a dance Friday night at Capital Beach. A riot of music and beauty it will surely be, with lots of pretty girls, plenty of good music and a world of fresh air to enjoy between times.

We have every intention of dancing as men never danced before and such an exhibition of the terpischorian art it would be a downright crime for any of those privileged to partake to miss. The dance will come as a fitting climax to a week of pure and unadulterated interest and joy for the hardest worked college in the University. All hail the dance.
