WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 23, 1913.

The attendance at yesterday's convocation, when our Chancellor spoke his word of greeting to freshmen and upper-classmen, was very, very much below par. To be sure, the floor of the chapel was filled, but the galleries were the more conspicuous because of their very emptiness. It should not be necessary to advertise this first convocation; every student should have it in mind from the day of registration. But it remains that the University was not fairly represented by the attendance of yesterday. We would suggest that next fall the professors and instructors give this convocation special mention in all their classes, urging its importance to all students.

FRESHMEN RALLIES.

All freshmen take note! Thursday morning two convocation-rallies, if you choose to call them such—are being held in your honor and for you alone. The men, who will scrap side by side in the annual Olympics for the honor of their class, will meet each other in Memorial Hall at 11 o'clock. The girls, who will stand on the side lines and cheer right lustily, will meet in the Temple Theater. For both men and women these rallies will be an introduction to Nebraska campus life and ideals. We look for your presence.

WILL NOT ATTEND DANCES.

How will the University know when dances other than those permitted are danced, has been a popular question this last week. Yesterday Miss Graham was asked by a member of the Daily Nebraskan staff as to her probable methods. She said that she will not go to the dances herself, that none not invited will attend these affairs, but that if the University people would not obey these rules voluntarily the authorities would announce drastic methods.

MANY GIVEN JOBS

Y. M. C. A. Places Over Forty in Permanent Places.

Mr. Sleeth of the employment bureau informs us that he is kept very busy and that applicants for positions are more numerous than are the positions waiting to receive them. Up to this time over forty men have been placed in permanent, well-paying positions, and over twenty-five young men have secured temporary employment. If an institution of this nature is given proper support only benefit for all participating can result. Business men needing hustlers, restaurants and boarding houses needing help, and private parties wanting work done about the home, such as furnace tending, lawn cleaning, and the like, will have no trouble in locating ambitious young students to do first-class work. Mr. Sleeth says he is doing his best to locate open places for his applicants, and regrets sincerely that he can not manufacture jobs for them.

placency and say, 'whichever way the people decide, the University wins.'

As to the question of adequate support for a university representing the state of Nebraska, properly housed and equipped, Chancellor Avery said that he had faith in the action of the people on the matter. The University is fulfilling a public service by supplying expert assistance in many lines of public activity. And the people will undoubtedly reciprocate by just recognition of the financial needs of the school.

In conclusion, the Chancellor said:

"Personally, I have no fear that the last phase of the last crisis will not be successfully passed, and I am sure that the influence of the students will be united with faculty, alumni and other friends of the institution in bringing about this result. The state is progressing in knowledge and culture; the character of each incoming class reflects the progress of the state. In spite of drouth the enrollment is larger than ever before in the history of the institution. Greater internal harmony has never prevailed. Hence I feel that all who love their university without regard to their personal interests may feel confident of its future prosperity."

THE CAFETERIA OF THE UNIVERSITY Y. M. C. A.

This is a strictly University Cafeteria. There is no bid made for the business of any other boarders. The students may be sure of having a strictly University crowd when they eat at the Cafeteria. It was established by the Board of Regents of the University for the men and women students of the University, not barring of course the members of the faculty and the other men and women employed about the University. The equipment belongs to the University and the money of the Cafeteria is handled by the Treasurer of the Student Activities.
