"YE CRONICLERS."

The University is being organized continually, as it sometimes seems, on the slightest pretexts. There are clubs for people who live in some cities, clubs for people who live in other cities, and clubs for people who live in the country. It is a poor sort of a "calling" or profession which does not blossom out with a name tag by which its members identify themselves. Because the dentists honor themselves with a fraternity, the pharmacists assume a no-holier-than-us expression and continue their correspondence on paper neatly labeling them as such. Now the journalists of the University have organized a club, and it behooves them to set forth in due constitutional form their excuse for existence.

Press clubs, journalistic fraternities, and the like have had their periods of bloom and decay at Nebraska. Recently there was a full-fledged organization which flourished and then dropped out of existence, for the reason that its members had too many other things in common to allow them full time for the working of the organization. So, it is not an unknown sea into which the "Chroniclers" are setting out, in organizing a press club. However, among the men who have taken time to make the University publications what they are, there is the unanimous feeling that there should be some medium through which they can work together and with the same general purposes for the good of the publication. The various papers and magazines have a common object, representing the various university activities and opening their columns for the student sentiment. It is for the purpose of furthering this work, and making the publications more nearly representative of actual university life that the organization has been formed. If it is found to fill an actual need the organization will be continued and broadened. If, however, it is but an imaginary need, the "Chroniclers" as a society will probably go the way of their predecessors.

THE KANSAS PROTEST.

Kansas put it up to Nebraska to act on the Clinton Ross matter, expressing a willingness to abide by whatever conclusion the Nebraska board reached. It is to be hoped that the matter is settled, then, with the action of the board yesterday morning. The board met for a careful consideration of the evidence submitted by Manager Hamilton as to whether there was a "gentleman's agreement," and voted unanimously that the evidence was not conclusive. It remains for Kansas to accept this action in good faith, as representing the opinion of the Nebraska campus. Altogether too much has been said on the matter, and the episode has been a blot on the Missouri Valley minutes for the 1913 season. Re-opening the discussion at this stage in the game will undoubtedly cause a cessation of athletic relations, and the Valley is not strong enough to stand internal warfare.

FLORENCE CHAPMAN WILL SING.

Musical Convocation Thursday Will be Favored With Song Recital.

Thursday's convocation will be held in the Temple theater at the usual hour. Miss Florence Chapman, accompanied by Marjorie Anderson, will render the greater part of the program. The following is the program:
Caro Nome, from Rigoletto—Verdi.
Could My Songs—Hahn.
Coppelia—Delibes.
The Swing; If No One Ever Marries Me; The Cuckoo—Liza Lehmann.
Since You Went Away—Johnson.
The Fairy Pipers—Brewer.
Will o' the Wisp—Spröss.

ROSS CONTROVERSY OVER.

Captain Purdy is still on the side lines taking his daily workouts in the capacity of coach. The captain's knee has not mended as rapidly as was thought for at first, but he is able to get around without the aid of crutches. Halligan, who should have been on the side lines instead of playing against the Aggies, has been taking things a little easier this week and will not do much but try and get back into condition for the Jayhawker contest. The back field men who were bruised quite a little in the Argie game have been doing light practice. All are doing their best to give the Kansas aggregation the best that they have. It is likely that the lineup Saturday will contain quite a number of second string men, thus saving the regulars for the Jayhawkers.

A. H. Meyer of the U. S. soil survey will spend this semester at the University preparing a chart on Sanders, Douglas and Cass counties.
