REGISTRAR HAS MANY LOST ARTICLES IN HIS POSSESSION.

Many students having lost articles and not being able to locate them will do well to call at the Registrar's office, for many articles found have been turned over there and owners fail to call for them. Articles found are turned in at several different places on the campus, the Rag office, the Library and the Y. M. C. A., and the owner has difficulty in locating what he has lost. Only recently a young man of a purse containing a considerable sum of money and has failed to locate it because he does not know that the Registrar's office is the proper place to apply for such articles. Several articles are now being held there for identification.

BRIGGS LOOKS FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS HERE

Mr. Geo. N. Briggs, special representative of the Philippine bureau of education, was on the campus the most part of the week looking for teachers for the Philippine schools. Looking for young women for work in domestic science and young men for supervision work was the main object of his visit.

AMUSEMENTS

Knitted shawls, hoods and mittens, such as the womenfolk wore in the civil war days, are worn at times by the women of the cast of "Little Women," which is appearing at the Oliver Theater today and tonight. Being unable to find such articles in the shop, Miss Jessie Bonstelle, who stages "Little Women" for William A. Brady, had a supply especially made by the old ladies of the New York Shutin Society, an institution for aged women. Miss Bonstelle did not have to do much explaining as to what was needed, for most of the old ladies had worn just such garments when they were girls, and had knitted them themselves, too. When Miss Bonstelle tried to explain, one of the inmates, with a face like a benediction, broke into a sunny smile and said: "Laws sakes, child, what are you talking about. I guess I know better than you do what kind of hoods and mittens and shawls to knit. All you need to do, honey, is to get me some needles and yarn."

John Cort's Feature Festival with its own special orchestra and forty famous artists, headed by the renowned beauty, Lillian Russell, to be seen in this city, is called Feature Festival because there are numerous all-star specialties in the attraction, but the amusement is not strictly a vaudeville entertainment as vaudeville is ordinarily interpreted these days. A cheap moving picture show with two or three variety performers is nowadays referred to as vaudeville, and in view of the fact that John Cort's Feature Festival costs the intrepid impresario as much as grand opera costs it would be a pity to refer to it as ordinary vaudeville, and Mr. Cort relies on the public to correctly discriminate in estimating it comparatively with promiscuous vaudeville. The program clearly enlightens the auditor as to the magnitude of the Cort attraction, the names enrolled representing the highest class of artists in their respective lines of work. Miss Russell's company includes every sort of theatrical amusement—tragedy, comedy, drama, pantomime, burlesque, character-acting, singing, dancing, opera, spectacle, magic, etc., and in selecting the artists for this varied program Mr. Cort spared neither means or money to secure the premiere of each department. Miss Russell's weekly financial exaction alone amounts to more than the total required to exploit the ordinary first-class dramatic attraction, and the combined salaries of the forty artists would more than finance the most magnificent of grand opera programs. Hence the claim that the Lillian Russell company is the costliest theater amusement in the United States, the most financially extravagant theatrical attraction ever sent on tour in America. Miss Russell will be seen in her new act, the much-discussed "Mildred Disrobes," in which the fair Lillian does more robbing than disrobing. The so-called disrobing feature is by no means as abandonously sensational as some of the promiscuous newspaper reports would make it appear, the fair one merely robbing and disrobing herself of outer garments such as hats, cloaks, furs, jackets, coats, etc., in her display of the fashionable fads and fancies she recently collected in her visits to London and Paris. Incidentally, the renowned beauty will sing one or two of the sweet melodies that made her famous as the queen of comic opera, and will depict her daily routine in the propagation of health, youth and beauty.
