MINN. SENDS STRONG GROUP OF DEBATERS TO DEFEND HER COLORS FRIDAY.

TICKET SALE PROMISING

Indications Point to a Financial Success if Entire School Boosts.

For a second time this fall Nebraska will go against her old foes from the northland, armed to the teeth and prepared for anything but defeat. Not on the turf of the athletic field but upon the platform of the Temple theater, will these warriors meet, and there will ensue wordy arguments and great oratory.

Tickets are rapidly being reserved and the sale promises to be the best of late years' history. Those who desire the best seats should buy their tickets today without fail.

Twice during the last year the Scarlet and Cream has been waved over the defeat of Gophers; first, in debate and then in their own game, football. Rankling somewhat over past defeats, and determined to win, the team that Minnesota sends to Lincoln this year is the pick of the school's talent in argumentation. Their men have spent years in debating either in high schools or on the varsity teams, and they stand high in school activities other than debate.

The Minnesota men of the negative team are:

Donald L. Pomeroy, the veteran of the squad; Harvey Hoshour, and H. Dean Campbell. Pomeroy is well known on the campus and is another man who has taken an active part in debating work since his freshman year, having been a member of his class debating team in both his freshman and sophomore years, and was last year a member of one of the intercollegiate and extension squads.

Harvey Hoshour is a middle law student, managing editor of the Minnesota Magazine, member of the all-university council, and was last year business manager of the Gopher. He completed in the Mercer prize law debate in 1912, and was a member of the extension squad of debaters last year.

Dean Campbell received his first debating experience at West high school, Minneapolis, where he debated for three years. He was a member of his class teams at the university in his freshman and sophomore years, and was a member of the Forum cup winners team in 1912. Campbell is a junior in the academic college and a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Men of the Affirmative Team.

The men who form the affirmative team are no novices in the art of debating. Like the Minnesota team they also possess one veteran, tried in the crossfires of many intercollegiate contests. Phi Beta Kappa looms up under several of the names, as well as many other honors both in scholarship and school activities.

Reed R. Dawson, '14, of Lincoln, was a member of the class of 1910 in the Lincoln high school on the scholarship honor roll of which he was the first two years. He was chairman of the junior "prom" committee, is captain of Company I, of the cadet battalion, and is a member of the Silver Lynx. He was in the Kormet Klub opera. He is taking the Arts and Science course. Next year he will enter the Harvard law school.

Homer G. Hewitt, '15, of Brewster, graduated as valedictorian of the class of 1908 of the Sargent high school. After graduating he taught for three years, two as principal of the Oconto schools. He entered the university in 1911. He was a member of both the freshmen and the sophomore class de-

Chancellor Avery Urges Support of the Debate

The Nebraska-Minnesota Debate is an all-University event. All University people should hear it.

In preparation for the debate, the team has done enough investigation to publish a book of more than 150 pages on the immigration question. The work has all been done under the direction of university professors, who are experts in economic, sociology and politics. To hear the results of exhaustive accurate research reinforced by clear thinking and made interesting by good language. Attend the Nebraska-Minnesota debate.

Next to conservation of our resources, immigration has been pronounced the gravest problem with which the nation must deal. Improve the quality of your citizenship and tighten your mind's grasp on current politics, by hearing that vital issue intelligently discussed at the Nebraska-Minnesota debate.

Some one who has heard both, has said that there is no more information in a debate in congress on some great public question than there is in a similar conflict of minds between the forensic representatives of universities. You cannot afford a ticket to Washington to hear congress discuss the immigration question, but you can afford a ticket to the Nebraska-Minnesota debate.

Come to the debate. You will be entertained as instructed. Nebraska's debaters are able speakers; so are Minnesota's. Members of the two teams are young men of interesting personalities, whose words will have a meaning and a charm all their own. To see as keen and clean a conflict between the Cornhuskers and the Gophers as you saw on the gridiron in October COME TO THE NEBRASKA-MINNESOTA DEBATE. SAMUEL AVERY, Chancellor.

IS NEBRASKA'S TWELFTH YEAR

Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Contests in the Central Debating League.

Nebraska's twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth intercollegiate debates (1902-1913) will be held Friday evening, December 12, the eighth annual contests of the Central Debating League (Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin), into which Nebraska was invited on its formation in 1906, after she had for several years debated with Colorado college and Kansas, Missouri and Washington universities and with Iowa once.

Nebraska's competitors this year, Minnesota and Iowa, are the universities with whose forensic representatives Nebraska have been the least successful viewed in terms of judges' verdicts. While Nebraska debaters have won the judges' decision over Wisconsin twice (1910 and 1912) and over Illinois all three times, they have broken even with Iowa, winning in 1905 and 1907 and losing in 1909 and 1911 by split decisions, and they have three times lost to Minnesota by split verdicts.

The Iowa team this year as usual was chosen last spring, the Nebraska team, five weeks ago. The Minnesotans were chosen last May.
