The Glee club, just on the eve of their supposed trip, find themselves without a manager, and with the question of just when the trip will begin and just where they will go is as much in the air as it was some months ago. The club some time ago selected a manager in Chalmers Gellatly and the arrangements were turned over to him, now, on account of outside business that requires all the time of the manager-elect he has been compelled to give up the office and the matter of his successor is the thing that is troubling the club at the present time. The club has called for applications for the position the same to be in by Friday next when the selection will be made that is hoped will be final.

The requirements for the position are simply the applicant must have had experience in the work and be an individual with a patience that will equal that of the immortal Job, together with the "pepper" of a John McGraw.

The trip of the Glee club will be made independent of the Mandolin club which has heretofore been allied with the organization. The statement that the Mandolin club has breathed its last this year as an organization has been verified by members.

Don Miller and Another Uni.
 Student Prevent Robbery

one of the shoppers. He was detected in the act by Miss Gray, one of the clerks. She notified Miller, also a clerk. In the meantime the pick-pocket saw that he was discovered, and so he diplomatically returned the purse and started for the door. Miller gave chase. The hare and hound run led southward for a block, and thence westward on N. It was a sort of running fight. The capturee clung to the captured with the tenacity of a bull dog. The captured tried again to shake him off, but his efforts were unavailing. A large crowd followed. Miller appealed to no less than a dozen of them to help him stop the thief, but they only opened their mouths in awe, and stared.

Finally the student—he of the unknown cognomen—appeared on the scene. Miller again appealed for help, and this time it was not in vain. The student seized one wrist, Miller seized the other, and the deed was accomplished. Meanwhile another clerk had notified the police, and in due time—due time meaning, in the case of the Lincoln police, about half an hour—the patrol wagon rolled up and whisked the thief away to the station.
